BLACK 'PUBLICITY HOUND,' BROWN QUOTES FARLEY

Tells Mail Committee This Was 'Personal Remark' He Said Was Made About Senator.

POSTAL HEAD DENIES STATEMENT

He Also Contradicts Predecessor on Some Other Parts of Story About Visit to Office.

By the Associated Press. WASHINGTON, Feb. 24.—Walter F. Brown, former Postmaster-General, told the Senate Airmail Investigating Committee today that Postmaster-General Farley had called Senator Black (Dem., Ala.), chairman of the committee, a "publicity hound." Farley denied he made any such remark.

Brown said the remark was made on Jan. 19 on his visit to Farley's office to return ocean and airmail contract correspondence which he said had been found among his personal effects.

"He is just a publicity hound, but I said anybody I said so because I have to get along with him," Brown quoted Farley as saying.

The committee was thrown into somewhat of an uproar when Brown approached the stand, at Senator McCarran's request, to tell of the alleged remark, the substance of which Brown had refused to disclose yesterday.

Brown and McCarran clashed. When McCarran asked Brown what the remark was, the former Postmaster-General, after turning to Farley and obtaining his permission to proceed, attempted to explain the conversation leading up to it.

"I want you to answer the question," McCarran stormed. "You'll answer my way and make your explanations afterward." "No, I'll answer it my way," Brown shot back heatedly.

"You'll answer it my way," McCarran raged. The argument continued until Brown turned to Farley for his permission.

Farley said: "Mr. Brown is at liberty to make any statement I am supposed to have made."

After Brown had related the alleged remark, laughter swept through the committee room. Farley turned very red and so did Black. The latter, however, appeared to be enjoying it hugely.

"That's all," Black asked when Brown had finished. McCarran turned to Farley, who was seated only a few seats to Brown's right.

"Mr. Farley," he asked, "did you or did you not in substance or effect make such a statement?"

"Mr. Brown, I made no such statement," was the reply.

Prompted by McCarran, Farley said Brown's accounts of some of the circumstances and conversations that took place while the papers were being delivered were "substantially correct." Then their testimony differed.

Another Denial by Farley. Brown said he had complained to Farley about the assignment of postal inspectors to the air mail investigation.

"I have absolutely no recollection of any reference to the postal inspectors," Farley said. "As you know, Senator, this department has always co-operated with the committee."

Even before McCarran asked the direct question, Farley assured him that "it certainly said nothing derogatory about Chairman Black or any other committee member."

This Week's Weather Outlook. By the Associated Press. WASHINGTON, Feb. 24.—Week beginning Monday: Weather outlook for the upper Mississippi and lower Missouri valleys and the Northern and Central Great Plains—Generally fair and cold first part of week, some precipitation with warmer latter half.

Those aboard the plane were: E. L. Walker, Rock Springs, Wyo.; J. Sterling, Mayor of Benton Harbor, Mich.; Bert McLaughlin, Perry, Ia.; W. B. Berglund, Boone, Ia.; Marcelus Zinsmeister, Des Moines, Ia.; Lloyd Anderson, Cheyenne, Wyo.; Eric G. Danielson, Cheyenne, Wyo.; and Miss May Carter, Cheyenne, formerly of Omaha and Chattanooga, stewards.

Six Flyers Continue Search. Snow and sleet swirled over the rugged and sparsely settled Utah-Wyoming plateau, making anything more than a cursory search impossible either from the air or ground. Nevertheless, six United Air Line pilots took off late in the day to scan the snow-covered peaks and canyons until darkness forced them back.

The hunt turned to the vicinity of Fort Bridger, Wyo., late in the day, when an anonymous report was received that an unidentified plane had been seen in that locality not long after the departure of the missing ship for Cheyenne. This report, telephoned in, said the plane was seen between Church Butte and Twin Butte, near the Salt Lake City-Cheyenne air route.

Another report, from Le Roy, Wyo., said a plane had been heard over Manila, Utah, 50 miles southeast of Le Roy, at 2:45 p. m. yesterday.

The snowfall in the last 24 hours reached seven inches in the lowlands and greater depths in the mountains.

All Landing Flights Checked. "It looks bad," commented Frank Caldwell, operations manager for the air line at Cheyenne. "That country is dangerous."

"There's a chance the plane came down on a level strip, but we've checked every emergency landing field in that region and none of them had a trace of the plane. If the ship's radio was not out of commission the pilot could use it while on the ground. We haven't heard a word from him since the plane left Salt Lake City."

It was in the same locality that an army air mail plane was wrecked and two army flyers killed a week ago.

The missing plane, a low-wing twin-motored transport, carried only enough fuel for five or six hours, and the silence of its radio since shortly after it left the Salt Lake City airport was regarded as of greatest import by air line officials.

Stormy weather held army air mail ships off the eastbound route today. Lieut. Frank M. Cronin of the Army Reserve joined the search for the missing transport for a time, and army flyers were ready to keep a sharp lookout whenever they were able to resume regular flights.

Reports of the sighting, or hearing of the motor, of the missing liner, received from various points in Northeastern Utah and Southwestern Wyoming were explained as having arisen through the passage of another transport plane which was forced to land yesterday evening at Rock Springs, Wyo. SHIP LIKELY FORCED DOWN IN MOUNTAINS

Unreported Since Friday Afternoon—Low-Hanging Clouds and Snow Hamper Hunt.

By the Associated Press. SALT LAKE CITY, Utah, Feb. 24. Hope for the safety of the five passengers and crew of three of the United Air Lines passenger plane, unreported since it took off here Friday afternoon for Cheyenne, Wyo., was gradually fading late today as the hours wore on. But there was a possibility the eight—seven men and a woman—had survived a forced landing or crash and were waiting aid at some inaccessible spot. The plane carried only light lunches and a few blankets.

Those aboard the plane were: E. L. Walker, Rock Springs, Wyo.; J. Sterling, Mayor of Benton Harbor, Mich.; Bert McLaughlin, Perry, Ia.; W. B. Berglund, Boone, Ia.; Marcelus Zinsmeister, Des Moines, Ia.; Lloyd Anderson, Cheyenne, Wyo.; Eric G. AUSTRIAN FASCIST MARCH ON VIENNA EXPECTED TODAY

Home Guard Leaders Said to Plan to Seize Government, With Dollfuss Acquiescing.

CONCENTRATION OF FORCES RUMORED

One Report Is That Move Is Precaution Against Massing of Nazis on German Border.

By the Associated Press. VIENNA, Feb. 24.—A "March on Vienna" by the pro-Government and Fascist Heimwehr was reported imminent tonight as dozens of freshly-fueled trucks carrying home guardsmen rolled out of town for an unannounced destination.

Rumors were that Heimwehr leaders would concentrate their men in outlying towns and converge on the capital to seize the Government reins tomorrow, with Chancellor Dollfuss acquiescing to the movement as King Victor Emanuel did when Benito Mussolini marched on Rome.

The fact that Vienna was plastered with green and white portraits of Prince von Starhemberg, Heimwehr commander, and Vice-Chancellor Emil Fey, a Heimwehr chieftain, was considered as strengthening the reports.

Rations for Three Days. The home guardsmen had orders to carry rations for three days, but were not told in advance what their objective would be.

There were comments that they might be bound for the Austro-German border, as a precaution against the massing of Nazis in Germany, but inquiries at frontier points revealed no concentrations on either side.

(An official statement issued in Berlin said reports published in Austria and the United States regarding the searching planes, which the border were "the purest fabrication and represent one of the customary contemptible attempts to bring the German Reich into disrepute.")

Every public telephone booth and every street gathering in Vienna had posters of Fey and von Starhemberg. Shop windows, billboards, buildings, stations and other structures bore the placards.

Among Other Rumors. Meanwhile, there were many other rumors—that von Starhemberg sought a conference with the exiled former Empress Zita; that Dr. Karl Buresch, Finance Minister, was about to be thrown out of the Cabinet; that Chancellor Dollfuss was conferring about an Austrian-Hungarian-Italian military and economic alliance.

Meanwhile, the health and position of President Miklas aroused comment in political circles. He was upset considerably by the hanging recently of a tramp under a martial law edict, and the recent Socialist uprising and bloody civil war were known to have depressed him so much that he appeared anxious to resign.

Dollfuss decree ousting Socialists from office affects Miklas and Dr. Buresch in some degree. Miklas was elected with the help of Socialist votes and Dr. Buresch has democratic sympathies.

15,000 POLICE TO KEEP ORDER IN LONDON TODAY

Crowd of 50,000 Marchers and Sympathizers Expected at Hyde Park Protest Meeting.

By the Associated Press. LONDON, Feb. 24.—Nearly 15,000 foot and mounted police will be on duty tomorrow to handle trouble makers during a big unemployed demonstration in Hyde Park, where 2000 "hunger marchers" will hear speeches of protest against unemployment legislation now before the House of Commons.

A "Congress of Action" held by marchers' delegates from all parts of Great Britain today in nearby Bermondsey found a new ready-made grievance in the arrests of Tom Mann and Harry Pollitt, Communist leaders, and there was a growing discontent in some marchers' camps tonight.

Mann, 70 years old, and Pollitt, 40, were charged with making seditious statements.

Police were especially prepared to deal drastically with London toughs if they join tomorrow's demonstration and foment disturbances.

Leaders of the Labor party have disavowed the movement, and the conservative London Times has openly labeled the march as an attempt of Communists to launch a revolutionary coup.

CLEANERS LOSE BLUE EAGLES FOR PRICE CUTTING

Two St. Louis Firms, Howard's and Supreme, Are Ordered to Turn in Insignia.

FIRST ORDER OF KIND HERE

Cases Will Be Referred to Department of Justice, State NRA Compliance Chief Says.

By the Associated Press. Two St. Louis cleaning and dyeing concerns were ordered to surrender their Blue Eagle insignia by Gen. Hugh S. Johnson yesterday because of alleged price-cutting in violation of the provisions of the NRA code governing the industry.

They are Howard's Cleaners, Inc., doing business as Howard's Cleaners, and Tabler's Cleaners, with headquarters at 2515 North Grand boulevard and about 30 branches, and the Supreme Cleaners, 6635 Delmar boulevard.

R. K. Ryland, State NRA Compliance Director, also stated that the cases would be referred to the Department of Justice for investigation. Violation is punishable by a maximum fine of $500.

First of Kind Here. The order was the first made on recommendation of a code authority in St. Louis. Two Blue Eagles were removed last fall for violation of the President's Re-employment Agreement.

Action against Howard's Cleaners, Inc., followed a hearing at noon today before Ryland after a recommendation that the insignia be withdrawn had been sent to the National Compliance Director at Washington by A. P. Hartman, chairman of the code authority for the industry in the St. Louis district.

The specific violations cited was a newspaper advertisement appearing Feb. 15 offering to clean dresses, suits and overcoats for 60 cents "cash and carry," whereas the code minimum was 75 cents.

Called before the code authority, Ryland said, R. E. Patton, president of the company, stated that he had heard the code had been amended as to minimum prices but that he had not attempted to verify the report at Washington.

Ryland asserted the company continued to do cleaning for 60 cents after it made inquiry at Washington and had been advised that the 75-cent minimum still was in effect.

Statement by Company. In a statement issued last night Patton defended the action of his company, which is controlled by the Gullitt Cleaning & Laundry Co. of Memphis, Tenn., operators of cleaning establishments in principal cities in Eastern and Central States.

"Howard's has, in the past, and will, in the future, maintain the schedule of wages and hours for its employees called for in the dry cleaning code," the statement read. "We will continue to conform to all the provisions of the code that are just and valid."

"The difficulty the NRA has encountered with the dry cleaning code is entirely attributable to its unjust, invalid and highly unfeeling attempt to fix prices that destroy the cash and carry business."

"The handling of the dry cleaning code has been a typical illustration of bureaucratic bungling from the outset. The action today is unwarranted, but since all of our protests against the injustices of the code have heretofore fallen upon deaf ears, we have no reason to expect the code authorities to suddenly recover their hearing now."

Patton referred to a decision of the New York Supreme Court in a controversy involving the cleaning code given last Tuesday, holding that the National Industrial Recovery Act does not provide for establishment of a fixed price in any industry for varying types of service.

"It appears now," Patton continued, "that the only relief that may be expected must come from the courts. We are content to rest our case with the St. Louis public."

He quoted the New York decision as stating that the litigation was an effort to drive the cash and carry cleaners out of business.

A Comparison of Costs. Ryland, commenting on the claim of some cleaners that they are able to do cleaning at lower than the code minimum because of the "cash and carry" business.

FORD BALKS AT NRA PRICES; TO MAKE OWN STEEL

Lets Contract for Construction of $10,000,000 Plant at Dearborn.

Special to the Post-Dispatch. DETROIT, Mich., Feb. 24.—Refusing to accept the fixing of steel prices under the NRA code, Henry Ford is going to make his own steel.

A spokesman for the Ford Motor Co. tonight confirmed reports originating in Pittsburgh that Ford will build a $10,000,000 steel plant next to his great River Rouge factory at Dearborn.

Contracts for erecting a blooming mill, a continuous hot-sheet mill and a cold-rolling plant, have been signed with the United Engineering & Foundry Co. of Pittsburgh.

Ford will thus become the first motor manufacturer to carry out the automobile builders' ancient threat to produce their own metal.

Reports have been current for some time that General Motors was contemplating building its own mills.

ONE KILLED, 11 INJURED IN BUS CRASH AT MOBERLY

Illinois Man Loses Life When Chicago-Kansas City Coach Crashes.

By the Associated Press. MOBERLY, Mo., Feb. 24.—One passenger was killed and 11 others and the driver were injured tonight when a heavy bus got out of control on a slippery highway near Clinton Hill, 15 miles west of here, crashed through a fence and turned over in a ditch.

The dead passenger was identified by papers found in his clothing as George T. Fisher, Pekin, Ill., en route from Chicago to Denver. An Illinois fishing license gave his age as 58.

Mrs. August Bailey, described as elderly, was critically injured. Attendants at Woodland Hospital here said she was injured about the head and her recovery was doubtful.

M'Graw Suffers Relapse, His Condition Is Serious

Baseball Man Apparently Making Rapid Recovery When He Takes Turn for Worse.

By the Associated Press. NEW ROCHELLE, N. Y., Feb. 24.—John McGraw, veteran baseball leader, suffered a relapse tonight and officials at New Rochelle Hospital said his condition was grave.

McGraw, stricken with uremic poisoning some days ago, apparently was making a rapid recovery when his condition took a sudden turn for the worse early this evening. Later tonight word came that the patient had begun to rally.

Late tonight Dr. L. B. Chapman issued the following bulletin: "After passing a comfortable day, the patient suddenly developed a severe intestinal hemorrhage. Condition considered serious."

Mrs. McGraw was summoned to the hospital.

HITLER PUTS 4,000,000 UNDER OATH TO OBEY HIM

More Than Million Nazi Functionaries to Pledge Absolute Subservience Today; Von Hindenburg Passes Out of Picture.

RADIO CEREMONY BEGINS IN MUNICH

Mass Vow of Fealty to Be Part of General Celebration of Fourteenth Anniversary of Founding of Their Party.

By the Associated Press. BERLIN, Feb. 24.—Throughout the Reich at 10:30 a. m. tomorrow every sixtieth German will swear to the following:

"I swear unshakable fidelity to Adolf Hitler and unquestioning obedience to him and the leaders designated for me by him."

The more than a million men and women who will thus pledge themselves to Germany's Chancellor-Dictator are all "Amia-Walter," or officers of the numerous political, economic, professional, social and labor organizations which constitute the separate divisions of the Nazi movement.

With the oath-taking, President Paul von Hindenburg will virtually fade out of the governmental picture and Hitler will be the de facto ruler of Germany.

Those Who Will Take the Oath. Those who will take the oath will include, among others, 375,000 political party bosses, 120,000 labor officials, 205,000 Hitler youth leaders. They will be conducted by radio with Munich, where thousands of Nazi department heads gathered on the fourteenth anniversary of the founding of the Nazi party.

In Munich Chancellor Hitler's personal representative, Rudolf Hess, will take the pledge. Hitler was scheduled to speak tonight, with the oath the main ceremony tomorrow.

The more than a million Nazi functionaries—1,017,000 to be exact—will swear fealty in unison, their right hands raised in the Hitler salute. They will thereby duplicate what more than 3,000,000 Nazi Storm Troopers and Steel Helmet Veterans did automatically when they joined their Brown Shirt battalions. Then all men, more than 4,000,000 Germans or one citizen out of every 15, will have pledged absolute obedience to the Chancellor.

These four millions hold all the power in the new Germany, except that represented by the army. But the army, too, is Hitler's instrument, for since Dec. 1, 1933, its oath is one of allegiance not to the President or to the Constitution, but to "people in the Fatherland"—and no army officer or private will deny that Hitler represents the people.

Hitler Speaks in Munich. In Munich tonight, in the place where he once dodged flying beer bottles and chairs, Chancellor Hitler opened the exercises. The scene was the beer cellar where 14 years ago he, then a little-known carpenter, announced to a few followers the Nazi program of 25 planks.

Tonight the hall was jammed with 3000 followers and the entire Reich heard the leader. He announced that the annual "appeal to the nation" would be held, but he did not specify whether this meant another plebiscite or elections.

Regarding the foreign policy, he said the Nazi government, because of its tremendous backing, never had "to cater to a Chauvinistic appeal for popularity" and that therefore foreign entanglements were avoidable.

In giving assurance of Germany's pacific intentions, he added that "a politician who has the backing of the people will avoid bloodshed and will appeal to national strength only in case of emergency."

He went on: "I never have to tell foreign diplomats that no foreign political success is needed to win the nation. We already have it for this reason we can, without difficulty, dedicate our efforts to international peace."

Spirit of Army to Prevail. The spirit of the army will permeate the third Reich, said Hitler. "Soldiers were the most valiant," he explained. "The Nazi movement."

STATE-OWNED PLANTS TO REQUEST PWA LOAN

North Dakota Group Wants $4,384,000 to Carry Out Industrial Program.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 24.—A group of North Dakota representatives, headed by A. C. Townley, Non-Partisan League leader, is prepared to present to the Public Works Administration a formal application for a loan of $4,384,286 to finance a program of State-owned industries.

The application is signed by Gov. William Langer and by H. B. Hanson, chairman and secretary, respectively, of the State Recovery Committee. Townley said arrangements were being made to file the application Monday.

The program calls for:

- Four woolen mills, at Dickinson, Jamestown, Minot and Langdon.
- Two central storage plants at Bismarck and Minot.
- One clothing manufacturing plant at Fargo.
- Fifty-one produce storage plants in the several counties of the State.
- One general cannery in the Yellowstone irrigation basin to be supplemented by home cannery auxiliaries.
- Two shoe factories.
- Three tanneries.
- One linseed oil mill.

The application sets forth the following estimated money requirements: First month, $438,428; second, $876,857; third, $876,857; fourth, $876,857; and fifth, $1,121,287.

Townley said Minnesota members of his delegation were interested purely because the industrial plan was a part of the Non-Partisan League's national program.

General to consider prosecution for violation of the industrial law. Complete absence of the labor board from the present picture suggested today that the many conferences between Davis and Budd representatives already had led to a virtual agreement.

A chief cause of friction within the labor board has been over whether the board should use legal authority or moral force as its chief instrument.

Wagner, dissatisfied with its progress, recently obtained an executive order from President Roosevelt specifically authorizing the board to conduct employee elections. Believing still more is needed, he has been drafting a bill to give the board congressional sanction, outlaw management-inspired company unions, and define what collective bargaining is.

Wolman has not expressed his views recently, but in the early days of the board he insisted that practical conciliation of disputes failing the agency should use the moral force of public opinion to back its judgments.

A. J. THROOP HELD ON NEW CHARGE IN GRAFT SCANDAL

Accused of Bribery After Seeking to Withdraw Guilty Plea in St. Clair County Conspiracy Case.

WON'T SAY WHETHER HE WILL TESTIFY

Previously Indicated He Would Appear Against Four Alleged Co-Conspirators Tomorrow.

With the trial of four defendants in the St. Clair County tax graft scandal set for tomorrow in Circuit Court at Belleville, Addison J. Throop, who changed his mind after pleading guilty and indicating that he would be a witness for the State, was arrested yesterday on a new charge of bribery.

Bond for Throop, former chairman of the county Board of Tax Review, was fixed at $50,000, but this was reduced by City Judge Borders of East St. Louis to $2500, after Throop was released a few hours after his arrest.

Application for a reduction of the bond was filed by Throop's counsel, Philip H. Listman, who said $50,000 was unreasonable. Judge Borders took that view, adding his opinion that the tax graft cases "have become a joke."

"It is time the State's Attorney prosecuted the defendants or dismissed the charges," Judge Borders said. "He ought not to resort to such tactics to arrest this poor man."

The new charge against Throop brought by State's Attorney Zerweck in a warrant sworn out on the eve of the trial, is designed to strengthen the case against Throop, who has been prominent in East St. Louis church and Boy Scout activities.

To Use Own Statements.

In his case, it was explained, it will not be necessary to prove a conspiracy to solicit bribes, the charge in which he was named originally with the others. The new charge is that on Nov. 1, 1931, he accepted $1000 offered in behalf of an unknown corporation to influence his judgment in fixing the corporation's assessment for tax purposes. The evidence against him, Zerweck said, will be Throop's own statements, before the grand jury, and elsewhere, while the investigation was being conducted.

Corruption on a new charge, Zerweck said, carried with it a mandatory sentence to the penitentiary of from one to five years. On the conspiracy charge a jail sentence may follow conviction, but the maximum is five years in the penitentiary and a fine of $2000.

Won't Say He Will Testify.

Throop was arrested in the forenoon at his East St. Louis printing office. He had been at liberty under $10,000 bond. "What can I say," he inquired of a reporter who called him at the jail for a statement. "This is all a surprise to me." Throop would not say whether he had any intention of testifying at the trial which begins tomorrow.

He pleaded guilty last Jan. 8, but three weeks later sought to withdraw his plea and stand trial. A hearing on his motion to that effect is to be held Thursday. He will have a preliminary hearing on the new charge of bribery Saturday before Justice of the Peace Schoenberger at Belleville.

Four to Be Tried Tomorrow.

Those who will go on trial tomorrow on the conspiracy charge are Frank P. McKane and Charles E. Melvin, members of the Board of Review; Arthur P. O'Leary, former chairman of the board, and Edward J. Delmore, vice-president and auditor of Hunter Packing Co. As a result of the same investigation, Harry Parker, former confidential employee of Throop's printing shop, was indicted on a forgery charge, but he has not been apprehended.

Assistant Attorney-General J. J. Neiger, who conducted the investigation which led to the indictment, will aid in the prosecution.

INVESTIGATION IN WISCONSIN OF INSANE PATIENTS' DEATHS

Persons Said to Have Died of Heart Disease Found Injured; One Held for Murder.

OSHKOSH, Wis., Feb. 25.—An investigation by a legislative committee into charges of brutal treatment and violent death among patients at Northern State Hospital for the Insane was capped today by the forecast of its chairman that wholesale dismissals of staff members and the criminal prosecution of some would take place. The chairman is State Senator Morley Kelly.

The inquiry was initiated by pathologists not connected with the institution who reported that Oscar Schreder, Sheboygan, a patient, had been choked to death.

The inquiry brought out that most of the patients who died were physically vigorous. The professional witnesses asserted the proportion of deaths ascribed to heart attack was above normal.

No man Brown, an attendant who had cared for Schreder, was held on a charge of first degree murder.

CORSE PAYTON, VETERAN

'BEST BAD ACTOR,' DIES

One-Time Star in "Over the Hill to the Poorhouse" Succumbs in Charity Ward in Brooklyn.

NEW YORK, Feb. 24. — Corse Payton, veteran matinee idol of more than a score of the old-time melodramas, notably "Over the Hill to the Poorhouse," and widely known as the world's "best bad actor," died yesterday in the charity ward of a Brooklyn hospital. He was 67 years old. He had been ill since December.

A native of Centerville, Ia., Mr. Payton made a name for himself throughout the Middle West as leading man of stock companies before he came East.

Besides his widow, Mr. Payton is survived by a sister, Mrs. Mary Spooner of New Canaan, Conn., who also was once active in the theater.

Brief funeral services were held here today. The body is being taken to his birthplace in Iowa for burial.

9 MEN ARRESTED ON CHARGE OF SELLING OBSCENE MATTER

Rounded Up by Police Squad in Drug Stores and Places Handling "Art" Magazines.

Detectives and policemen under Detective Sergt. Verheyen arrested nine men in six downtown drug stores and news stands yesterday on a charge of violating a city ordinance which forbids the selling of obscene literature. All cases are returnable in Police Court No. 1 on Monday and Tuesday.

Arrests were made at the Westport Drug Store, Ninth and Pine streets; the Pierce Building News Agency and at news stands at Broadway and St. Charles, Sixth and Washington, 412 Washington and 214 North Sixth.

Magazines featuring "art" pictures were seized. Verheyen said the cases will be based on the print-matted in the magazines, since "the pictures could be called art." He said the drive on the magazines would be continued.

SALESMAN, SUFFERING FROM NERVOUS ILLNESS, ENDS LIFE

Frank M. Rapp, 24, Shoots Himself in Bathroom While Parents Are Near by.

Frank M. Rapp, 24-year-old salesman, shot and killed himself last night in the bathroom of his home at 1906 McCausland avenue, while his parents and 16-year-old brother were sitting in the living room. The parents said he had suffered a nervous breakdown several weeks ago.

After he had gone into the bathroom at about 8 o'clock, the family heard a shot and the father, Frank Rapp, found him dead, a bullet wound over the heart and a Luger automatic pistol nearby.

TWO FINE PROGRAMS BY THE BALLET RUSSE

Dancers Present "Three-Cornered Hat" and "Beautiful Danube" at Odeon.

By THOMAS B. SHERMAN.

THE Monte Carlo Ballet Russe with the assistance of the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra scored another triumph at the Odeon yesterday afternoon in a program that reached a peak of exhilaration in a performance of the "Three-Cornered Hat." The music by Manuel De Falla, the sets and costumes by Pablo Picasso, the choreography by Massine and the spirit and wit of the dancing by Massine, Tomanova, and their associates were all of a piece. The play of vitality between all the elements involved was unceasing and had the virtue of great and calculated precision without losing the effect of freedom.

But despite the harmony of all the parts, Massine, in the role of the miller, dominated the proceedings from the moment the curtains parted. His tremendous leaps, the virile staccato of his heels and his perfect bodily control were not only marvelous to look at but played their part in unrolling the story. Mile. Tomanova gave him effective assistance. The subtlety of her gestures proceeded also from a finely stylized conception of her role of the miller's wife, to which she brought besides a very striking personal beauty.

Too much cannot be said of the sets and the costumes. They had a clarity, directness and economy of means that shouted aloud the genius of their author. The "Beautiful Danube" which followed the "Three-Cornered Hat" was, as might have been expected, complete contrast to the latter's high color and lusty humor. A mood of lyrical delicacy informed the whole plot and Leonida Massine as the Hussar again dominated the action though Alexandra Danilova, as the street dancer, and Tatiana Riabouchinska, as the eldest daughter, were lovely counterpoises to his masculine brilliance. This ballet was dappled, of course, to the music of Johann Strauss.

The performance began with a choreographic projection of Tschalkowsky's Fifth Symphony called "Destiny." Although it has too overhanging with quasi-Wigman symbolism to attain the complete and full-bodied articulation of the rest of the performance.

Antal Dorati conducted the orchestra with precision and authority. The evening program was devoted to "La Concurrence," a ballet of Andre Deraun who also did the sets with music by Georges Auric, a dance abstraction done to the music of Brahms' Fourth Symphony called "Choreartium" and a repetition of the "Blue Danube." In general the use of music that was not written to a program lacks the harmony and unity of music put down for the express purpose of illustrating physical action. This applies to the use of both the Brahms and the Tschalkowsky symphonies. The stage spectacle does not amplify the ideas involved in the music. It contracts them.

The fourth and final performance of the Monte Carlo Dancers will be given this afternoon. Husband Acquitted in Wife's Death; PITTSBURGH, Feb. 24.—Ending the unusual case of a husband being tried for murder almost a year after his wife's death was classed as suicide, a jury today acquitted Robert Smith Schaefer, 34, of the Keosaupe business man and former army captain.

LACLEDE REVALUATION HEARING IS POSTPONED

Delay Due to Failure of Engineers to Complete Appraisal of Physical Property.

By the Jefferson City Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Feb. 24.—Hearings on a revaluation of the property of the Laclede Gas Light Co. of St. Louis for rate-making purposes, which were scheduled to begin before the Missouri Public Service Commission here on Feb. 27, were postponed today by the Commission because its engineers had not completed an appraisal of the physical property of the company. Chairman J. C. Collet notified the company and City of St. Louis that a date would be set for the hearings later, probably in April. The hearings likely will require several weeks.

The revaluation grows out of a rate increase case filed by the company in 1927, in which the Commission fixed the company's valuation for rate-making purposes at $47,000,000 and granted the company a rate increase of about $600,000 a year. This order was reversed by the Missouri Supreme Court in November, 1931, on an appeal by the City of St. Louis, on the ground the Commission had erred in not deducting certain retirements of property, and in its findings on "going value." The Court remanded the case to the Commission for a revaluation.

The appraisal of the company's property in the revaluation has been in progress since October, 1932. A tentative valuation of $39,062,000 was fixed by the Commission for the company's property, and a domestic and commercial rate reduction of 3 1/2 per cent ordered. In a decision by the Commission last September. The company applied to Federal District Court in Kansas City for an injunction to restrain enforcement of this order, and that case still is pending. The order for the rate reduction, and fixing the tentative valuation, was issued in a case initiated by the

ST. LOUIS POST-DISPATCH ADVANCE IN INDUSTRIAL PRODUCTION CONTINUES

Reserve Board Says December Rise in Department Store Sales Was More Than Usual.
By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 24.—December advances in industrial production and wholesale prices which continued into early January were reported today by the Federal Reserve Board.

In its monthly survey of conditions, the Board noted also that member banks continued to carry large excess reserve balances with the system, these balances afforded a steady pressure toward business loans.

The index of industrial production in December, after four months of decline, was put at 75 per cent of the 1923-25 average. The board said this reflected the fact "that industrial output, which ordinarily declines in December, declined by less than the usual amount." It added:

"The volume of construction work continued to increase, reflecting chiefly further expansion in public works but also in part an increase in private construction. The number of employees in factories declined by somewhat more than the usual seasonal amount while employment on public projects increased substantially.

"Sales of merchandise by department stores increased somewhat more than usual in December. Sales were larger than a year ago in all of the Federal Reserve districts, the largest increases being reported for the southern districts."

The board said wholesale prices advanced in late December and January to a point 21 per cent above
the low level of last spring.

WHITNEY FACES PECORA IN CONTROL FIGHT TOMORROW

Senate Committee Ready to Go Into Alleged Propaganda to Kill Proposed Regulatory Bill.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 24.—Information on the efforts of the New York Stock Exchange to defeat the pending bill for governmental regulation was assembled quietly over the week-end by Senate investigators in an effort to throw some light on the controversy arising from charges, vehemently uttered and vigorously denied, that Exchange officials have incited a nation-wide "propaganda campaign."

In New York, Ferdinand Pecora, counsel for the Senate Banking Committee, and his staff made ready to place in evidence copies of a letter by President Richard Whitney of the Exchange, to heads of corporations whose stock is listed on the big board, together with other documents and data on the publicity activities of the Exchange.

Chairman Fletcher of the committee, author of the "propaganda" charge, meanwhile declined to make any comment on Whitney's apparent denial and counter assertion that if public opinion backs the Fletcher accusation, then the right of free speech is "dead."

Whitney to Be Heard Again.

The committee hearings will be resumed on Monday, with George U. Harris, a member of the Exchange's Publicity Committee, on the stand to continue testimony begun yesterday. At the committee's request he will bring with him data which he was unable to produce at his previous appearance, in addition to some that Pecora requested be sent today to his New York office.

In the afternoon, Whitney himself will take the stand to reiterate his argument against the bill. Pecora and his associates will be ready with questions drawn from the long record of the investigation of stock market practices, in an endeavor to give point to their contention that the Exchange is unable to curb reprehensible practices and that, therefore, the Government should assume that responsibility.

Further opposition to the bill was presented by exchange officials and members today before the House Commerce Committee, including an assertion that the measure would give the Federal Trade Commission power to "destroy" corporations which might incur its displeasure.
This argument was presented by Frank R. Hope, president of the Association of Stock Exchange Firms.

Attack on Trade Board.

"The Federal Trade Commission
does not have to convict a particular corporation of any particular illegal transaction," he said, "but can regulate it out of existence by control of credit, restrictions on new financing and removal of its securities from exchanges without in any way justifying its motive or the soundness of its judgment."
If this proposal is carried out,
the Federal Trade Commission through its control of so many of the varied phases of financial and economic life of the country, may restrict the operations of and even destroy corporations that incur its displeasure.

Although the measure gives the right of a court appeal from adverse commission rulings, he said
"it must be appreciated that many such orders and decisions of far-reaching and final effect will be primarily administrative or orders involving the discretion of the commission and might thus not be subject to review by the court in a manner sufficient to present the full controversy for judicial review."

Pending Measure "Unworkable."
E. A. Pierce, who went to Wall Street 30 years ago from a New England farm and virtually revolutionized the brokerage business, told the committee he approved regulation, but not necessarily by the Federal Government. The debate of 1929, he said, might have been avoided if the exchange had imposed a maximum loan value on securities.

He testified that his firm, E. A.
Pierce & Co., one of the largest in Wall Street, had some 45,000 accounts and was carrying an aggregate of $6,000,000 in loans on unrelated securities which he felt were perfectly safe. The bill would require the registration of all stock issues.

He said he felt the pending measure was "unworkable" and that its margin requirements were too rigid, contending such a provision should be flexible and easily adjusted to the conditions of the moment. He advised, as a means of curbing speculation, the elimination of all accounts that did not carry an initial deposit of $2000. A committee member asked if he would like to see the bill enacted as it stands and he replied:

"Yes, it would drive 85 per cent of my competitors out of business within three months, and if I could stay out of Leavenworth or Atlanta, I'd be setting pretty."
"Would this bill tend to keep you in Atlanta?"
"I'd rather be there than any place I know, if it is enacted, because I'd be sure of three meals a day at least."

BRITISH ARMS ENVOY IN ROME TO SEE MUSSOLINI

Rumor Capt. Eden Will Suggest Premier Call Meeting of Signers of Four-Power Pact.

ITALIANS SAID TO OPPOSE IDEA

Neville Chamberlain in Speech Says Position of England's Defenses Must Be Reconsidered.

By the Associated Press.
ROME, Feb. 24.—The suggestion that Premier Mussolini call a four-Power meeting to settle the disarmament question will be made by Anthony Eden, British Lord Privy
Seal, it is rumored here.

Since direct negotiations between France and Germany seem to have reached a deadlock, the story is that Mussolini in his forthcoming conversations with Capt. Eden, will be asked to convocate a session of French, German, Italian and British representatives.

It is not generally expected,
however, that the Italian Prime Minister will accede to such a request since he thinks a four-Power conference should be called only after extensive diplomatic preparation has removed the main differences between France and Italy.

Capt. Eden arrived this afternoon from Berlin to lay before Mussolini the results of his disarmament conversations in Paris and Berlin.

He refused to make a statement on the scope of the talks, and went immediately to the British Embassy.

In Paris he was told that France would no longer consider rearmament—a reference to Germany's demands for parity in armament and a well-equipped army of 300, 000—but only disarmament.

German statesmen, it is understood, advised Capt. Eden of at least qualified approval of a British arms reduction plan, which has aroused little enthusiasm among the Italian authorities, who are said to believe that disarmament is impossible under present conditions and that the only way to forestall an arms race is by a European agreement.

Neville Chamberlain, British Chancellor of the Exchequer, in a speech at Plymouth, England, said last night that the position of Great Britain's defense forces must be reconsidered.

"In our effort to cope with our own financial stringency and give a lead to other countries in disarmament, we have reduced our defenses to a dangerously low level," he said. "The reduction of expenditures by postponement of building and replacement of stores cannot be indefinitely continued.
Some people think the navy is obsolete, and they would rather put their trust in airplanes. But do not let us imagine the airplane is a substitute for the cruiser. . . .
We cannot guard ships with airplanes. We must guard them with ships. No other country has done so much to demonstrate her desire for peace by disarmament as Great Britain has, but there is a limit beyond which we cannot go."

Scenes to Be Depicted in City Hall Murals

TWO of the four subjects selected for reproduction in murals at the Twelfth boulevard entrance of City Hall. Above, Sa-Ka-Ka-We-A (sometimes written Sacajawea), the "Bird Woman," guiding the Lewis and Clark expedition to a pass through the Rocky Mountains. Below, St. Louis in 1840, looking north along Front street from Walnut street. The murals will be painted by Carl Bonfig, CWA artist, who has finished two other murals at the Market street entrance to City Hall.

SUBJECTS FOR 4 MORE MURALS AT CITY HALL

New Work to Be Done by CWA Artist at Twelfth Boulevard Entrance.

Four historical subjects for murals to be painted at the Twelfth boulevard entrance to City Hall by Carl Bonfig, CWA artist, were announced yesterday by Director of Public Safety Chadsey.

The subjects are the mound builders, the landing of Laclede at the present site of St. Louis, the Lewis and Clark expedition and St.
Louis in 1840.

Bonfig has prepared an original sketch showing the mound builders at work, but the other three paintings will be from earlier works of other artists, photographs of which have been supplied by the Missouri Historical Society.

The landing of Laclede in 1783,
at what is now the foot of Market street, will be taken from the painting by Carl Wimer, in the possession of the historical society. The phase of the Lewis and Clark expedition, depicted by Alfred Russell, is that of Sa-Ka-We-A (more often spelled Sacajawea) an Indian woman guide, pointing the way for the expedition through the Rocky Mountains, in 1804.

The picture of St. Louis in 1840, from an early lithograph, shows Front street looking north from Walnut street, with the first City Hall and market in the foreground.

Two other murals, of the St. Louis statue on Art Hill, Forest Park, and the Lindbergh plane, Spirit of St. Louis, have been painted by Bonfig at the Market street entrance to the City Hall. Two more, with the subjects not selected, are planned for the Clark avenue entrance.

CAMPAIGN FOR $50,000 BY SALVATION ARMY

Soliciting of Program Fund to Start March 19; Directed by Lawrence McDaniel.

The Salvation Army's $50,000 fund campaign in St. Louis will begin March 19 under the direction of Former Circuit Attorney
Lawrence McDaniel.

The money is needed to carry on the Salvation Army program, which last year reached 250,000 persons in the city and suburbs. This
600 per cent over the number aided in 1929.

There were 4400 Salvation Army meetings in the district last year, one of the busiest in the 54 years of the organization's service in the city, with six corps of workers to carry on its program. Reclamation activities include unemployment relief, care for the aged and the handicapped, sheltering of children, the guidance of former convicts and care of convicts' families.

More than 200 State prisoners have been paroled to the Salvation Army here.

The Salvation Army fresh air camp at Ferguson provides healthful recreation for hundreds of mothers and children during the summer. A home and hospital for women is maintained at 3740
Marine avenue.

65-YEAR-OLD MAN, HIT BY AUTO, DIES OF HIS INJURIES

Edward Shealock Succumbs at City Hospital of Fractured Skull Without Regaining Consciousness.

Edward Shealock, 65 years old, died at City Hospital yesterday afternoon of a fractured skull and other injuries suffered at 1:30 a. m. when struck by an automobile at Seventh street and Park avenue.

Shealock did not regain consciousness, but was identified by a hospital attendant who knew him. His friend said he lived in the 1500 block of South Seventh street.

He was struck as he was crossing Park avenue by an automobile driven by a man who said he was Chester Bales, 1853 North Fifty-fifth street, East St. Louis. Bales, south-bound on Seventh street, said he struck Shealock when he swerved to avoid a collision with a car being driven east on Park avenue.

Mrs. Ehrman, who was the guest of the local chapter of the Ladies of the G. A. R. at a reception at Hotel Coronado Friday night, was driving to Kansas City with her husband. Morris suffered a fractured leg, and his wife, Leola, a fractured arm. Ehrman was cut and bruised.

Corned Beef and Cabbage Banquet.
The annual banquet of the Corned Beef and Cabbage Club will be held next Saturday, St. Patrick's night at the Gold Room of the Jefferson Hotel.

Under a strict construction of the Constitution the State can not borrow money to pay its payrolls and bills, except through a bond issue approved by the voters. To avoid conflict with these constitutional provisions, the State has decided to make direct payments on vouchers or warrant "jackets" for general revenue payroll accounts and other bills, and hold them until the State general revenue fund is sufficiently replenished to repay the items.

The bank is being compensated for these advances at the rate of 3 1/2 per cent interest a year, although it is not designated as interest. Instead of making direct interest payments in cash, the State will credit the amount it owes the bank in interest on the advances as an offset against interest due the State from the bank on State deposits the bank holds. The deposit interest rate, under the bank's deposit contract with the State, is 4 1/2-100 of 1 per cent a year.

The State has several million dollars on deposit in the various State depositories, including State bond sinking and interest funds, road money, and special funds, but the balance in the general revenue funds, for which the loans were made, today totaled only $230,000.

State Auditor Forrest Smith, who has charge of administration of the new sales tax law, has been rushing the organization of his forces for collection of the tax, but so far no revenue has been paid into the treasury. The first tax payments for the last half of January were due on Feb. 15, but extensions were granted because tax return blanks could not be placed in the hands of prospective taxpayers by that time. Tax payments aggregating more than $300,000 have been received, but are being held up until the taxpayers prepare formal returns, or returns which have been filed are checked.

When the sales tax act was passed by the special session of the Legislature, which adjourned last month, it was estimated the tax would produce between $4,000,000 and $7,000,000 in additional revenue annually.

Officials of the State Liquor Control Supervisor's Department today estimated the liquor revenue might reach $3,500,000 this year.

The revenue from the liquor and sales tax laws was designed to meet the relief requirements, relieve the financial plight of public schools of the State and retire a State government deficit of more than $1,500,000 incurred in 1933. One-third of the general revenue fund, into which the new taxes will be paid, goes to the public schools.

STATE BORROWS IN ORDER TO PAY ITS RELIEF SHARE

Delays in Collecting Liquor and Sales Tax Force Missouri to Get $250,000 Bank Loan.

By the Jefferson City Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.
JEFFERSON CITY, Feb. 24.—Although the Missouri Legislature appropriated $5,000,000 to pay the State's share of emergency unemployment relief costs during 1934 and three months of 1935, in its regular session, the State so far has had to borrow money from a Jefferson City bank to pay its portion of relief expenditures, due to delays in collecting the liquor and sales taxes enacted to provide the necessary funds for the appropriation.

The liquor control law, imposing liquor license fees and taxes, became effective Jan. 15, and the sales tax of one-half of 1 per cent on sales of tangible personal property and certain services, went into effect last Jan. 15. But so far only $27,634 of liquor revenue and no sales tax revenue has been paid into the State Treasury.

Due to this situation the State this month borrowed $250,000 from the Central Missouri Trust Co. of Jefferson City to pay its share of the $860,000 relief expenditures in the State during January. Of the remainder, about $200,000 was paid by local communities and $50,000 by the Federal Emergency Relief Administration.

Needs Another $300,000.
Because of the depleted condition of the State general revenue fund, due to declining revenues from regular tax sources, and the delays in collection of the new taxes levied by the special session of the Legislature, the State probably will have to borrow another $300,000 early in March to meet its share of the February relief expenditures.

Including the $250,000 already borrowed for relief expenditures, the State now owes the Central Missouri Trust Co. $1,925,874. This covers money borrowed by the State administration at interest since last September, to meet monthly general revenue payrolls and bills, and to take care of a deficit incurred in 1933 operations of the State government.

INSURANCE MEN TESTIFY AT TRIAL OF DR. WYNEKOOP

Defense Scores Point in Examination of One—Alleged Slayer in the Jail Hospital.

By the Associated Press.
CHICAGO, Feb. 24.—Dr. Alice Laidman Wynekoop testified today in the infirmary of the county jail, after the first week of her second trial on a charge of murdering Rheta Gardner Wynekoop, her daughter-in-law.

Defense counsel was elated at testimony obtained today during the cross-examination of 1929. Her three insurance agents put on the stand by the State in its effort to show that the 65-year-old physician killed her son's wife because of mercenary motives.

Hiram G. Brown, an agent of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co., testified that in applying for a policy on the life of Rheta Wynekoop, Dr. Wynekoop had told him one of her reasons was to banish from Rheta's mind the morbid belief that she was in ill health.

"Dr. Wynekoop told me that Rheta was afraid she was becoming tubercular," said Brown, "and that she wanted to have the insurance company doctor pass on her in order to prove to Rheta that such was not the case."

Brown said he had filled out an application for a $10,000 policy and that one of the company's physicians had examined her, but that for some reason the application was rejected.

Two other insurance agents were put on the stand. One, Miss Julia McCormick, told of preparing a policy on the life of Rheta Wynekoop at the request of Dr. Wynekoop. The application was for a $10,000 policy, but the company later reduced it by half, she said. Miss McCormick said she did not see the insured at any time during the negotiations.

The agent said the policy was the same in form and was arranged for in the same manner as a policy taken out by Dr. Wynekoop on the life of her daughter, Dr. Catherine Wynekoop.

In answer to Prosecutor Charles S. Dougherty's question, Miss McCormick said Dr. Wynekoop had asked that a "doctor with modern ideas about tuberculosis" examine Rheta. The State did not go fur-

MAN WOUNDED IN ARM SAYS ROBBER SHOT HIM

Tells Police of 50-Cent Holdup in County After Physician Calls Officers.

Suffering from a gunshot wound in the right arm, William A. Brown, 25-year-old clerk, applied for treatment yesterday at 5 p. m. at the office of Dr. Martin F. Kouri, in the Metropolitan Building.

He told policemen who were called by the physician that he had been held up in St. Louis County by a man to whom he had given a lift while driving into St. Louis on Manchester road. He related, he said, and the man shot him and fled across a field, after robbing him of 50 cents.

Brown, who said he lived at 41414 Flad avenue, was taken to City Hospital.

Value of Products Outweighed by Benefits to Unemployed, Report Says.

CHICAGO, Feb. 24.—The Illinois Emergency Relief Commission reported today its subsistence garden program—last year in downstate counties enabled 103,263 families to produce part of their own food. The report said individual and mass production garden projects, for which the commission furnished seeds and direction, provided $1,611,557 worth of vegetables and fruits.

Produce accounted for in the report included 1,229,222 cans of vegetables, 370,000 tons of potatoes, 307 tons of onions, and 53 1/2 tons of lima beans. The value of individual gardens averaged $13, the report said.

"Gratifying as the financial results may be," the report said, "they are probably outweighed by the improved health, reinforced Powder Keg.

By the Associated Press.
CHICAGO, Feb. 25.—Secretary of the Interior Ickes, replying to fault-finders of Administration policies, tonight told those groups identified with great wealth who seek a return "to the old system" that they were "laying a lighted match to a keg of powder when they raise difficulties in the way of President Roosevelt's program."

"They run the risk of blowing themselves up along with all the rest of us," he added in an address before a joint meeting of the Chicago and Cook County Leagues of Women Voters.

"I have noted that those who criticize the President and his methods offer not one single substitute policy," Ickes said. "They are negative critics. Hypocritically they grieve over bureaucracy, but they offer nothing affirmative. They are constructive critics. They are as lacking in effective remedies as was their administration prior to March 4."

History of Exploitation.
Tracing a history of American economic from Colonial days, which he said was not an attempt to "give a complete or even carefully balanced review of our American social order"—Ickes said the early Americans bred pioneers who, generation after generation, successfully coped with human and natural enemies in laying the foundation for the Republic.

"From exploiting nature, we turned to the exploitation of human beings," the Cabinet member continued, "to the building up of an industrial and commercial empire."

From the profits of human slavery in the South and of cheap immigrant labor in the North, the descendants of the pioneers "lived more and more lives of ease and comfort." Then came the series of inventions which developed "almost human machines at which women and little children could be profitably exploited."

"The brutal social dictum was announced that it was better for children to work in factories than to be on the streets, and our captains of industry cheerfully and not altogether unselfishly assumed that if they were not in factories children would be on the streets serving no good purposes."

"Rich Richer, Poor Poorer."
"And all the time the rich became richer and the poor poorer," he said, "and all the time there were relatively fewer rich and relatively more poor."

"The exploiters of our natural resources and the Simon Legrees holding to their tasks men, women and children too weak to defend themselves, early sensed the possibility that the economic system they were erecting might some day tumble about their ears unless they safeguarded it by securing control of government."

Ickes said they placed men in city councils, on county boards, in State Legislatures and in the halls of Congress "who knew which side their bread was buttered on." "Nor did these rugged individualists overlook the courts," he added.

"So the American political and industrial system that reached its perfect flower during the preceding administration continued to be controlled and fostered by those who profited most from that system," he asserted. "Shouting the slogan, 'less government in business,' the rugged individualist finally took complete possession of the government of these United States while a complacent President played with his cronies in a certain little green house in K Street."

"The frenzied dance of the derelicts of Wall Street became madder and madder," Ickes said, until "the falling of the skies in September of 1929."

"A Different Tale to Be Told."
"So much for yesterday," he said. "Today, and by today I mean that period since March 4 last, there is a different tale to be told although one that grows directly out of the past."

The people won in November, 1932, Ickes said, "because the rugged individualists, the captains of industry, the masterful financiers were so disorganized and frightened that they neglected to give their customary attention to the political affairs of the nation."

"The strangest procession to come to Washington after March 4 was composed of those who had been among the great and powerful under the old regime."

"It is fair to say that in the early days of the present administration there was a general disposition throughout the business world to beg the Government to come to the rescue of business." All requested to be saved from disaster, he said. Now Again the Time Changes.

Now, he said, "with a return to confidence among business men, it is regrettable to note there is already to be seen in some quarters a renewed tendency to disregard the rights of others."

Men who came frightened to Washington only a few months ago," he said, "are beginning to adopt the 'who's afraid?' attitude of the small boy trying to make himself believe he never has feared anything."

No one, said Ickes, expects the millennium, but he repeated his previously spoken belief that a "social revolution" happened Nov. 8, 1932, and said he was convinced that "the people themselves desire and intend to have a better social order" in America.

"Proponents of the old order, he said, have become 'carpingly critical' but he said it was his firm belief that "we have turned our back finally upon an era that history will regard at once as ruthless, sordid and glorious."

"I believe that our Constitution will continue to live, adapting itself to changing conditions, as it has from the beginning, so as to serve the higher purposes of an evolutionary society."

OVERCOME BY MONOXIDE GAS

Two Brothers in Garage Revived by City Inhalators.

John Rackonic, 12 years old, and his 21-year-old brother, Joseph, were overcome by carbon monoxide gas yesterday afternoon when working on an automobile in a garage behind their home at 4743 Flower avenue. They had permitted the motor to run with one door of the garage partly open.

They were revived by inhalators from the fire and police departments and taken to City Hospital.

ADAMS INDORSES SYSTEM OF BUYING PLANES FOR U. S.

Hoover Secretary of Navy Says It Would Be Unjust to Limit Profits to 10 Per Cent.

By the Associated Press.
WASHINGTON, Feb. 24.—Conceding that high profits had been made on Navy contracts when the aviation industry was young, Charles Francis Adams, former Secretary of the Navy, nevertheless told a congressional committee today he saw no reason for changing the system used for buying service airplanes.

He denied that America's aviation forces were inferior to those of any other nation, and said: "Some large profits were made before my time, but the cost and the profits have come down steadily, producing greater efficiency, too."

Adams jocularly, but with some seriousness, too, denied that he was the "Charles Francis Adams of Boston" who owned 500 shares of stock in the Douglas Aircraft Co. last Nov. 30.

He was asked if naval officers with whom he worked had been guilty of any "collusion" with airplane and engine manufacturers.

"I have no reason," he said, "to believe there ever was any such collusion. Our eyes were open to that possibility at any time, but I believe that we did as good a job as the Government could do."

When asked whether he favored a proposal to limit profit on Navy contracts to 10 per cent, he warned: "It would be very unwise, very unjust to undertake to limit profits to 10 per cent."

MO. PAC. TO SPEND $3,434,000 FOR IMPROVEMENTS THIS YEAR

Federal Court Authorizes Expenditures for Roadbed and Equipment.

Trustees of the Missouri Pacific Railroad were authorized by Federal Judge Faris yesterday to spend $3,434,971 this year for betterment of roadbed and equipment.

The trustees, L. W. Baldwin and Guy A. Thompson, stated that $718,020 would be drawn from operating funds for replacements in kind and $2,718,951 would be taken from the capital account for new or improved equipment.

Expenditures are to be spread over the entire system, about $3,000,000 being allocated to the Missouri Pacific lines proper and the remainder to subsidiaries.

PER PAGE PER THOUSAND

A BARGAIN Buy in Advertising!

For fifteen consecutive months, there has been a steady decrease in the price of advertising in the St. Louis Post-Dispatch per page per thousand readers.* A diagram of these declining monthly costs looks like a flight of stairs — fifteen steps down, and no steps up!

A BARGAIN in advertising has thus developed, which is important to advertisers because of the opportunity it offers to secure new sales volume at lower sales cost. Thousands of St. Louis families during the past year and a quarter have again become purchasers of all kinds of commodities. As these families rejoined the Post-Dispatch group of readers, the value of advertising has steadily increased as the advertising rates remained the same.

Therefore, advertisers can definitely increase their sales volume through increased advertising in the Post-Dispatch, and they can do this with genuine economy because of the new low cost per-page-per-thousand circulation.

Now is the time to bid for a substantial share of the growing volume of business in St. Louis by utilizing the strength of the newspaper that gives market coverage at low cost.

The Greater St. Louis Market THE BILLIONAREA

These are the natural boundaries of the market from which the average merchant secures 90% to 100% of his sales volume. Here the St. Louis Post-Dispatch gives thorough coverage of the family purchasing power. The cost per page per thousand families reached in Greater St. Louis is a safe guide to advertising ECONOMY and RESULTS.

WANTS TELL STORY OF LOST COMRADE

Drifting Seward on Wrecked Navy Plane; One of Three Swept Overboard.

Associated Press. BROOKLYN, N. Y., Feb. 24.—Two Army lieutenants propped up the body of their friend who had been drifting for five hours to the wings of a wrecked plane.

"We were over the water, two miles off Coney Island, when we experienced our first difficulty," said Lieut. W. S. Pocock Jr. as he related a cigarette.

Across the hospital room, with the left knee heavily taped, Lieut. J. H. Rothrock. The two men were rescued last night by the Navy destroyer Bernardo 15 minutes after their companion, Lieut. George F. McDermott, had been swept overboard.

When we hit the water, one of the motors broke away. But we weren't awfully worried at first. We drifted about for an hour. A police plane came alongside. It was a check on our boat. But we couldn't get to us. The police plane was waiting for the police plane to come. We had about 10 minutes. We were OK. Get us a boat."

Police Craft Forced Down.

The aviator learned after their rescue that the police craft had been forced down and taxied perilously close to shore.

"We burned all our smoke cans trying to attract attention. The water was coming in. We closed the door between the cockpit and the cabin, but that didn't do much good."

The tail was higher than any other part of the ship, so we drifted back on the tail, and it was forced to go down rapidly under our weight.

"We made a dive for the top wing and we lay there on the wing until about the time the sun went down. We were drifting seaward all the time."

"Our faces were coated with ice. We had no feeling whatever. We had been huddled ever since we started drifting at Kelly Field. There was no song we would always sing together, 'Dear Old Girl.' We learned a new one in Jacksonville. 'Dear Old Girl' and I can see McDermott now as he joined me."

Swept Overboard.

McDermott was swept overboard while trying to change his position. Pocock said. He grabbed the tail, and finally his companions pulled him back on the wing.

"He was delicious now, and two minutes to hold on. He kept saying 'Why doesn't the boat come?'"

"We were too paralyzed to help him, and a wave swept him off. We couldn't do anything about it."

Lieut. Rothrock, who had been lying on the plane, bound for Langley Field, Va., took up the story. "We clung to the wing. We saw a boat about 100 feet away. We shouted and shouted. I don't know much of what happened after that. I was all in."

The boat was about 25 feet away when they threw us a line. That was the Bernardo. They came alongside and took us aboard. They treated us fine."

The two aviators probably will be able to leave the hospital tomorrow. They suffered from exposure and severe skin abrasions, and Rothrock has a minor cut on his knee.

NASH MEN REJECT TO PCT. RISE

Machine Strikers Said to Be Holding Out for 20 Per Cent.

Associated Press. RACINE, Wis., Feb. 24.—Striking boys of the Nash Motor Co. refused today to accept a 10 per cent increase in pay offered by the company. Labor leaders did not announce their demands, but it was understood they were holding out for a 20 per cent boost in pay. "We want to disagree," said William S. Brown, president of the Racine Trades and Labor Council. Officers of the Nash Company confirmed refusal of the strikers to accept 10 per cent.

The strike at the Nash plant, where about 1000 men were affected, was sponsored by union-affiliated workers of the American Federation of Labor. In four plants of three other companies strikes initiated by the Racine County Workers' Committee continued in effect. There was no action at the two plants of the J. I. Case Company, the Elmhurst tannery and the Osage Clipper Co. factory. Approximately 1000 men have been employed in the plants. The Elmhurst tannery in a letter to William A. Swohoda, said that threats to bomb the plant and injure officers had been made and the company said it would hold the strikers responsible for damages. That windows had been broken. The

Army Pilot Escapes After He Landed Mail in Trees

Lieut. Charles T. Hollstein, flying the army mailplane from Cleveland to Washington, escaped with his life Feb. 23 after his plane crashed in a clump of trees near Uniontown, Pa. Here he is standing beside the wreckage. Although unconscious in the cockpit for two hours, he recovered and walked three miles for aid. Then returned and directed the moving of the mail.

Orchid Show Closes Today With a Native Featured

Cyrtopodium Punctatum (Florida Spray) One of the First to Win a Place, Let Alone the Spotlight.

A "native son" steals the limelight from the choice beauties of two hemispheres in the closing day of the Orchid Show today at Shaw's Garden.

Not for many years has a native orchid won a place in the show, let alone a place of honor. But this orchid, though native of habitat, is "exotic" in name and appearance. Botanists call it the Cyrtopodium Punctatum—prosaic enough, at that, when one understands that it refers to curved "feet" and spotted leaves.

There's nothing prosaic about its appearance, and Supt. Pring, who calls it simply the "Florida spray orchid," says it is outstanding among the native orchids. One of its half-dozen woody spikes bears a cluster of more than 60 blossoms, small and yellow-green barred with chocolate.

ARMY FLYER HURT BECAUSE HE WANTED TO SAVE HOUSES

Lieut. Deitz Refused to "Ball Out" in Fear Plane Would Hit Farm Homes.

By the Associated Press.

CRISFIELD, Md., Feb. 24.—Lieut. Harold Deitz, 22-year-old Army mail pilot who crashed near here last Thursday night, today told his father that he rode his plane to earth rather than "ball out" and chance the ship falling on one of the farm houses below.

Deitz spoke to his father, G. W. Deitz of Easton, Pa., from the hospital bed where he is expected to recover from serious injuries suffered in the crash.

"At first I thought of gaining altitude and balling out," his father quoted him as saying. "It was the only safe thing to do. There was no ceiling and I was flying blind. My gas was getting low. But down below I could see the tops of farm houses."

"If I balled out there was no telling where the plane might land. It might have struck one of the homes. I decided to land it."

Deitz did land his ship but the under carriage struck a tree and it crashed into a pole and he was hurled to the ground and his skull fractured. The wreck occurred in a fog.

PRINCE SOLICITS RELIEF GIFTS

August Wilhelm Takes Post on Berlin Street With Coin Boxes.

BERLIN, Feb. 24.—Prince August Wilhelm, the 47-year-old scion of the Hohenzollerns solicited coins for the winter relief fund today. "I've got 10 boxes," he declared, and expect to fill them all. "I'll be on the job all day today and tomorrow."

The fourth son of former Kaiser Wilhelm took his stand near the old Imperial Palace, on the famous Unter den Linden boulevard. Tomorrow, he will go about the working class section seeking "thuns." As coins clinked into his box he gave each donor a smart Nazi salute. Some, who hesitated, were rebuked, good naturedly. "If you don't come to pay," they were told, "please move on."

WOMAN KILLED IN EXPLOSION

Two Others Hurt in $2,000,000 Blast in Oklahoma.

By the Associated Press.

SEMINOLE, Ok., Feb. 24.—Mrs. Bob Hill, wife of an oil employee, was burned fatally and two other members of her family were injured today by a series of explosions which destroyed the Grisso gasoline plant of the Carter Oil Co., with its 14 tanks containing 280,000 gallons of fuel. The company estimated the loss at about $2,000,000. Mrs. Hill was burned in her home just east of the blazing refinery when an exploding oil tank threw flaming gasoline into the house, which was destroyed. Her husband was seriously burned and their 13-year-old daughter received minor burns.

BOY SCOUT CIRCUS CANCELED BY COUNCIL

Governing Group Thinks It Would Interfere With $139,000 Campaign.

The activities committee of the St. Louis Boy Scout Council has canceled the annual scout circus this year. The affair, usually held in spring, was the largest single scout gathering of the year and was the first of its kind among scouts in the country.

The committee gave as its reason the coming scout campaign for $139,000 in which scout leaders will be actively engaged until March 23 and which will prevent them from giving "sufficient time for the necessary and thorough preparation required for a successful circus."

It also said that "because the circus dates would be so close to the ending of the campaign and scouts would be going right back to the public to secure their fair share of financial interest in tickets the financial success of the campaign would be questionable."

The dates for the campaign have been postponed until March 12 to 23 and the day on which the scouts will take over the principal city offices has been changed from March 3 to 10. Scout Sunday, on which scouts will make speeches in the city's churches, is March 4.

Nominations for the 10 city offices which the scouts will fill were made last Saturday at a convention of patrol leaders at the Municipal Courts Building. On Wednesday a rally will be held in the auditorium of Scruggs-Vanderfoot-Barney, at which the candidates for Mayor will speak and at which campaign managers will urge the election of their charges.

The election will be held Saturday. Ballot boxes will be placed in the scout departments of Vanderfoot's, Famous-Barr, and Stix, Baer & Fuller.

Each district has held or will hold this week special meetings of its adult leaders to outline the plans of the campaign. Captains and seven-man teams to cover each section of the city will be appointed. Each scout will be requested to hang a card, "A Scout Lives Here," in the window of his home.

Troop Notes

Troop 178, Scruggs School, observed its tenth anniversary recently with a court of honor and parents' night. Harry F. Schollmeyer, a member of the troop committee and of the executive board of the St. Louis Council, and Walter Lorch were presented with 10-year veterans' pins by Scout Executive Beckman. Scouts George Schmidt, Robert Risch, Rudolph Meyer and Ormand Lay were awarded veterans' pins by Louis F. H. Schmitt, former scoutmaster. Sidney Cline, Robert Glenn, George Walters and Byron Jackson received five-year pins. Other awards included five tenderfoot, seven second class, three first class, two star and 18 merit badges.

Scouts Robert Koelene and Dan Dolan passed several tests at the last meeting of Troop 3, Grace Church. Instructions in signaling and knot-tying were given by Scoutmaster Blake.

Cub Notes

New members of Pack 9, Pilgrim Congregational Church, will be inducted into the pack at a parents' night meeting at 7:30 p. m. Thursday. S. C. Reaves, cub director of the St. Louis Council, will speak on "The Objectives of Cubing."

TO SPEAK AT LUTHERAN NOONDAY LENTEN SERVICES

The Rev. T. A. Weinhold, Kansas City, Takes Place of Illinois Pastor Detained by Illness.

The Rev. T. A. Weinhold of Kansas City will be the speaker this week at the Lutheran Noonday Lenten services at the American Theater, replacing the Rev. W. E. Hohenstein of Bloomington, Ill., who is unable to come because of illness.

The Rev. Mr. Weinhold's sermon topics, from Monday to Friday, are: "Is There Evolution in Religion?" "The Secret of Strength," "Youth's Consecration," "At Jesus Feet" and "Sinless Though Laden with Sin." Chaplain for the week will be the Rev. Arthur Nitz, pastor of St. Stephen's Church, Olive street and Pendleton avenue.

Clarence Howards Give Hawaiian Dinner Dance

IN response to invitations received several weeks ago from Honolulu from Mr. and Mrs. Clarence H. Howard, 3 Dromara road, more than two hundred guests attended a Hawaiian dinner dance given by Mr. and Mrs. Howard at the St. Louis Woman's Club Friday night. The Colonial room of the club was transformed into a realistic Hawaiian scene, many of the decorations having been brought by the host and hostess from the Hawaiian Islands, where they recently visited. Flowering acacia trees drooped over the entrances of the room and tropical palms and ferns were banded in the corners. The walls were covered with vivid Hawaiian scenes depicting the pleasant and leisurely life of Hawaii. Walkiki Beach, on which girls in native costume danced, was pictured and there was a scene of a Hawaiian girl emerging from a swim in which under-sea life was shown in bright colors. Another picture showed natives playing the ukulele under palm trees with monkeys swinging from the boughs and a pretty hula girl riding a surf board. The large pillars of the room were covered by imitation coconut trees from which hung exotic birds with brilliant plumage.

The room was outlined by long tables on each of which was a Hawaiian scene in miniature. A small grass hut rested on a grass plot in the center of the table and little dolls representing Hawaiian dancers and small palm trees in which there were tiny cocoons added an interesting touch to the centerpiece. Pineapples filled with sprays of French heather, of a deep rose tone and imported from Hawaii, further decorated the tables. A Hawaiian orchestra in native costume played in a large grass house arranged in the Colonial room. The menu, which was largely Hawaiian, ended with loss in the form of cocoons and pineapples.

During the dinner songs and dances were given by professional entertainers, the dancers wearing grass skirts in pastel shades, which were also brought to St. Louis by Mr. and Mrs. Howard for the party. The host and hostess received in the blue room before a bower of greenery in which hung leis of varicolored flowers. A lei was presented each guest by Mr. and Mrs. Howard as a token of welcome and friendship.

Among the guests were the host's brother-in-law and sister, Mr.

FIRE by Sinclair Lewis' "Work of Art," which is a saga of in-keeping, Alexander Woolcott is shopping about up the Hudson for a place to open the country hotel of his dreams. Already he and Mrs. George S. Kaufman are joint proprietors of a week-end tavern at Katonah, N. Y.

It isn't really a hotel, since only their own friends come as Saturday and Sunday guests, but it costs $10 a day flat and such celebrities as the Marx brothers, Bob Benchley and Moss Hart are frequently chronicled in its register. The best of everything from real Irish linen sheets to dry sack sherry and from boned shad to Sullivan & Powell's cigarettes (which can only be had in New York at the Players Club and which Raffles used to smoke) is to be available at the projected Woolcott caravansary. It is going to be a sort of sublimation of an innkeeper's dream with the piquant Master Alex himself playing a role combining the best features of genial boniface and expert managing director.

There are few enough people who at one time or another haven't thought they could improve on the details of whatever hotel they were stopping at, but few with the independence and resources to undertake such an elysian project.

The Empire Theater, which is currently celebrating its fortieth anniversary, is not only Manhattan's oldest and farthest downtown playhouse of note, but also its most glamorous. Its tradition of greatness triumphs over the successes associated with more modern and splendid uptown theaters, and an Empire opening night is still as much of a New York institution as first night at the opera or last night at the horse show. Even the brash Broadway paraphernalia and smart aces are on their best behavior at such occasions, that is, if they can get seats.

The smartest element of social and professional Gotham turned out last week for the opening of "Richard of Bordeaux," with Dennis King, and the colored carriage starters and extra policemen were busy with a crush of the old-fashioned but beautifully appointed motorists which indicate the real people. The Empire is gilt and plush and rocco inside, a perfect setting for gentlemen with square cut evening waistcoats in the old manner and magnificently jeweled ladies with Gibson girl hairdresses and flounces in their ankle-length skirts.

It is one of the few theaters where a little hand plays in a gilt-rimmed balcony above the promenade during intermissions, and gleaming toppers and dull finished opera hats were gallantly lifted to acquaintances to the time of Strauss waltzes. An Empire opening is a page out of New York's horse club and gas lamp past, surviving vitally in a less courtly era.

Harry Bull, who knows more about the fashionable faubourg of the town than any one we know, reports what is probably the only wine dispatcher in the world. He is in the service of a wealthy resident of upper Fifth avenue and his function is to see that during parties the guests scattered through a 40-room apartment are properly provided with beverages. From a central pantry he dispatches footmen all over the establishment with such commands as "Three bottles of Irroy, '26, to the blue room; a dozen of Mumm's for the punch in the drawing room; eight Scotch highballs in the conservatory; a decanter of the Otard-Dupuy, '65, in the master's study." On a chart of the house he keeps notations on the progress of the evening and at any moment can tell you who is drinking what and were. It's very efficient.

NEW YORK, Feb. 21. FIRED by Sinclair Lewis' "Work of Art," which is a saga of inn-keeping, Alexander Woolcott is shopping about up the Hudson for a place to open the country hotel of his dreams. Already he and Mrs. George S. Kaufman are joint proprietors of a week-end tavern at Katonah, N. Y.

MISS FRANCES REYBURN, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Valle Reyburn, 366 Walton avenue, photographed in Palm Beach, Fla., where she is visiting her grandmother, Mrs. Charles Fletcher Sparks of St. Louis, at her winter home.

or. Raymond Godfrey Twyefort changes his clothes, at a modest estimate, at least 40 times a week and nobody knows how many suits he has, not even Mrs. Twyefort. His prices are said to be the highest of any tailor in the country, sack suits at his establishment costing in the vicinity of $200, and dress clothes hunting outfits and formal attire of one sort and another costing substantially more. Wetzel, Bell, Schantz and the other well known custom tailors have never rivaled him in the field of costliness.

Mr. Twyefort himself is probably the dressiest fellow around town since Evander Berry Wall emigrated to the Place Vendome. He can be seen any morning, usually in a pale gray tailcoat with trousers to match, white spatterdashes, lacquered boots and magnificently folded Ascot tie, en route to his Fifty-seventh street office. Later he changes into more strictly formal clothes; black tails, spongebag trousers and a batwing tie of Spitielfields silk. He has created and, to a certain extent, popularized the colored dinner jacket for home wear. He is known once to have refused to serve a customer who came to his establishment wearing a morning coat and derby hat.

Riverview Terrace, a little-known mews in the shadow of the Queensborough Bridge, always has seemed to us the most desirable residential spot in Manhattan. High above the swift current of the East River, it comprises fewer than a dozen red brick and brownstone homes, whose fronts are on a narrow cobblestone private way, with an old iron picket fence, and then the abrupt gulf of the river. Great steamers and shugging trawlers, cargo ships from far-imagined places and glittering white Boston night boats, all the traffic of Long Island Sound passes by within easy stone throw, their whistles and sirens accompanying the leitmotif of the clacking elevated train on the bridge high above.

The parade of life in Riverview Terrace is less strident than elsewhere. There are mail boxes outside the doors; at night a crazy-tilted, old-fashioned gas lantern with hurricane glass illuminates its brief reach, and policemen and private guards seek its sheltered sanctuary for a clandestine cigarette. Delos Chappell lives there. He says the sounds of the river traffic lure him to repose as effectively as an ocean liner, with none of the accompanying instability.

URBAN ECHOES—Mme. Flutterby, whose "In Mayfair" column in "The Journal," is widely read, is Molly Thayer, originally of Boston. Window signs: "Today's Special Manhattan Cocktail, $20." The standpipes for fire engines along Park avenue are still marked "Steamer Attachment." Dashiell Hammett's coal-black mustaches and snow-white hair make him the most easily recognizable of current celebrities. Only at the Ritz Carlton and the Ambassador do the house footmen wear knee breeches at night. If you can name a cocktail they don't know you can have it on the house at the Park Lane. Peter, Frank Sauter's Persian cat has had a platinum wash to match the new decorative scheme of the Sauter apartment. The Florida trains are running in five and six sections.

The waiter's strike, just hasn't made any difference. Jed Harris has shaved three times a day his beard grows so fast. The first hurdy-gurdy of the season was observed last week outside the Metropolitan Opera House playing "Peanut Vendor." The Weylin is doubling the size of its bar. Otto Kahn is about the last opera cloak wearer. Mike Romanoff is still around, but very humble. He's been beaten up again. This time by Peppy d'Albrow over a tiff at the Ritz. Mme. Pettipas keeps the last restaurant where an old-fashioned soup tureen is passed about from table to table. Alfred Lunt and Lynn Fontanne once moved their apartment to be near a bakery that made crisp French croissants. John Lodge, the film actor, wears his watch on a long, thin chain around his neck, like glasse.

Hobbies

OF PROMINENT ST. LOUISANS

ST. LOUIS SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA
BY OLIVER F. RICHARDS

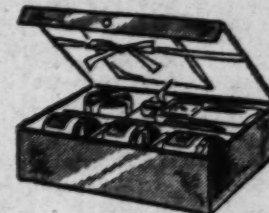

My hobby for years has been music, but what kind of a hobby-horse this has turned out to be? Instead of being able to ride it, it has always ridden me. Oh! the many miles I have walked and the shoe leather I have worn out trying to collect enough money to keep the Symphony Orchestra going in St. Louis. For 54 years certain loyal souls have kept the torch of music burning in St. Louis. Year by year they furnish more oil, (in the shape of money) that the light might shine over a larger and larger public, until today we stand among the recognized "music-cultured" cities of America.

Yes, my hobby is music, but it's money that makes the mare go!

SHOE COMPANY ACQUIRES LEASE AT 720 OLIVE ST.

W. B. Huette Company Will Take Ground Floor Quarters Next to Thompson Restaurant.

WAREHOUSE LEASED
AT 9TH AND GRATIOT

Burton-Dixon Corp. Sought
Source of Supply for Territory Covering Radius of 100 Miles.

The W. B. Huette Shoe Co. has acquired a 10-year lease on ground floor quarters at 720 Olive street, in the building of the John R.
Thompson Restaurant Co., with plans for a retail shoe store. Arthur S. Martin & Son, specialists in business property, arranged the lease.

The new store will be equipped with an ultra-modern front, and the latest type fixtures, air conditioned and redecorated. It is scheduled to open April 1 with a line of men's and women's shoes.

The lessor was the John R.
Thompson Restaurant Co., which occupies half of the ground floor of the building. A Woolworth store, at the southeast corner of Eighth and Olive streets, holds a 99-year ground lease from the Turner estate.

Now on North Sixth.
The Huette company now has a store at 420 North Sixth street and one in Wellston. It had stores at 210 Olive and 718 Olive street, at different times, covering a period of 15 years.

The Burton-Dixon Corporation has leased a warehouse at Ninth and Gratiot streets as a source of supply for the territory, of which St. Louis is the center, covering a radius of 100 miles. It manufactures bed springs, mattresses, studio couches, cots, gliders and feather pillows. Company headquarters are at 2024 South Racine avenue, Chicago, Ill. The new St. Louis personal warehouse is the twelfth established by this company. The others are in Chicago, Brooklyn, New York, Newark, N. J., Detroit, Mich., Lansing, Mich., Cleveland, O., Cincinnati, Milwaukee, Pittsburgh, Pa., and Memphis, Tenn. Joseph Brown is the St. Louis district manager.

Distributes Liquors.
The General Distributors Corporation, wholesale importers of wines and liquors, has taken over the building at 118 Sidney street, comprising 65,000 square feet of available floor space, under a long lease. It will handle the Schenley line of liquors and wines. George D. Steffans is president, Edwin Schiele, vice-president, Charles Niemeyer, vice-president, Alfred D.
Luehrmann, treasurer, and Warren
E. Brown, secretary.

The entire seventh floor of the Forest City Building, formerly known as the Drygoodsman building, at 1627 Washington avenue, has been leased by the Forest City Manufacturing Co., through the Isaac T. Cook Company. The company manufactures ladies' wash dresses. Besides the above floor, which contains 8000 square feet of floor space, it already has the rest of the building, except the first and third floors and basement, a total of 48,000 square feet of floor space.

Millinery Company Lease.
Approximately 25,000 square feet of space on the sixth floor of the Mallinckrodt building at 901-905 Washington avenue has been leased
by the Leader Millinery Company, represented by the Mullin-Walters Realty Company. The Isaac T.
Cook Co. acted for the lessor.
The Arcade Tailoring & Pressing
Co. has leased the store room at 819 Delmar boulevard, and Mrs.
Hilda B. Fortman, operating the General Radio Co., has taken a store room at 4577 Easton avenue under a lease. Both leases were arranged by the Isaac T. Cook Co.
A store room at 120 North Seventh street, in the Fullerton building, has been leased to Morris Cooper. The store is 25x40 feet. The lessor was the Fullerton estate, represented by Jack Thomas, manager of the building.

The Brooks Paper Co. formerly at 213 North Second street, has leased the three-story building at 15-317 North First street, comprising 23,000 square feet. The building is equipped with sprinkler system, steam-heating plant and elevator.
The lease was made by Eugene L.
Wehmer, manager of the industrial property department of Breit-

FIVE HORSES FINISH NOSES APART IN MIAMI NURSERY STAKE

FOREVER YOUNG IS WINNER; RACE WORTH $3100 TO HIS OWNER

By the Associated Press.

MIAMI, Fla., Feb. 24.—Two-year-old racers had their inning at Hialeah Park today when 15 of the best young colts and geldings in training in Florida matched stables in the three furlongs of the Nursery Stakes No. 1. Mrs. Payne Whitney's Forever Young survived a blanket finish to win by a nose.

Coupled with the Monmouth Stable's Sablin, Forever Young was the standout favorite, but it took one of Jockey Alfred (Silim) Robertson's good rides to get the son of Peter Pan home in front. Four others were close behind, only noses apart, with E. C. Grogan's Wise Prince second, Mrs. Dodge Sloan's Black Gift third and Mrs. C. O. Iselin's Arbitrary just out of the money.

Forever Young ran the distance in 34.2 seconds and paid $3100, while his owner received $310.

Sharing the honors with Forever Young were Mrs. Nat Ray's lightly weighted Stealingaway, winner of the Homestead Purse at one mile, and Mrs. F. J. Heller's Agraria, which accounted for the Winter Garden Purse, also at one mile.

In the Homestead, starting winner of his first four starts over the winter turf, attempted another comeback in the new silks of Jones and George, but finished among the also-rans. The colt's new owners purchased him from Morton L. Schwartz yesterday for a reported price of $7000.

Agraria, odds-on favorite, ran the mile in 1:36.4 to break a record of finishing second in three straight races. At the finish he was a half length in front of City Bit, with E. R. Bradley's Kentucky Derby candidate, Boy Valet, third. The mutual handle for the day—$375,622, which set a new high mark for the meeting.

ST. LOUIS, SUNDAY MORNING, FEBRUARY 25, 1934.

"Reunion in Vienna"

With The Lunts
Real Hit in London
Neel Coward Called Upon
Suddenly to Take a Part in His New Play, "Conversation Piece," with Yvonne Prim-temps as Its Star—Bergner Coming to America Shortly.

ALFRED LUNT and Lynn Fontanne of New York Theater Guild fame are enjoying the best London season of their careers in the American play "Reunion in Vienna." It already had been their vehicle for some 400 performances in the United States before they took it to Shaftesbury Avenue—London's Broadway.

Lunt, who was Milwaukee's gift to the stage, and his English-born wife are hailed by the London Sunday Times critic as "The greatest pair of stage players now living."

The lanky, ever-willing talker Lunt has made an observation on a difference in the attitude of American and English audiences toward the play as the result of his experience here.

"English audiences take the underlying story of the comedy much more seriously," he said. "They laugh when there's a laugh from the 'story angle' but not at the individual wisecracks. There are no long laughs or hearty guffaws as in America because the English audience is 'ashy' so it won't miss any of the plot."

NOEL COWARD, author and actor who last appeared with the Lunts on the New York stage in one of his plays, was "drafted" to take a part temporarily in his new play "Conversation Piece" in Manchester and then in London when Romney Brent dropped out of the cast to finish a musical play he is writing. Coward was persuaded to take his place as the middle-aged guardian of the heroine, a young Frenchwoman, played by Yvonne Printemps, the famous French actress, who is making her debut in an English speaking role.

She is the second prominent European actress to be brought to England for a stage debut in an English speaking role, by the veteran London producer, C. B. Cochran. The other is Elisabeth Bergner, the diminutive Viennese favorite, who is scoring a big hit in Margaret Kennedy's play "Escape Me Never." Cochran announced recently at an American luncheon at which "The Bergners" as she is called, was guest of honor, that she will make an American debut next.

A departure in theatrical tradition was arranged for the presentation of "Conversation Piece." Because of the large number of applications for seats, two successive "First Nights" were arranged. Prices for both, of course, were increased, the second "first night" extra proceeds going to the actors' fund and other charities.

Paul Althouse, Tenor.

In Recital Tuesday

Paul Althouse, tenor of the Metropolitan Opera House, who was engaged by Arturo Toscanini as soloist for 10 performances of the Philharmonic Orchestra's concert this season, and who appeared here earlier this season as soloist with the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra will be presented in recital at the Odeon Tuesday evening in the Civic Music League series of concerts. Old English, German lieder, Wagner excerpts, an operatic aria, and two groups of modern songs make up the program. Althouse, a specialist in Wagner and the first American singer to appear with the Metropolitan Opera, spent 10 years in leading roles in that institution, went to the Chicago Civic Opera where he had like success and returned to the Metropolitan, where his successes this year have been more pronounced than ever. Meanwhile he has sung all around the world. In Germany he was first to sing the role of Menelaus on Richard Strauss' opera "Helen of Egypt" which he also sang in Vienna.

THE WEEK'S NEW FILMS

By Nic

GEORGE RAFT, who has been ried to Franchot Tonne in "Moulin Rouge," at Loew's, makes her husband and all of her friends believe that she is somebody else and even into a gigolo who later becomes a cabaret dancer, rising to both of these jobs from a lowly one in a Pennsylvania coal mine. You see George was something of a hooper even in his underground days winning cups in amateur night contests and having pretty definite ideas respecting his future. Gradually he works his way up the scale from New York to Paris via London taking along with him a succession of partners, including Sally Rand and Frances Drake. Always looking out for George Raft he makes it a point to get rid of every partner who falls in love with him for he contends that business and love just won't mix. This is all very well until Carole Lombard comes into his life. Then they both fall in love and decide to do big things in the dance world together. George buys a cabaret in 1914, but the movie producers, with considerable foresight, or intuition, or something, knew he was going to and got out an advance orchestration. The dance is broken up by the war fever and George announces that he will enlist in the Belgian army. Looked upon as a pretty good publicity and couldn't see how the struggle would last over a couple of weeks anyway. Partner Lombard is so put out at his fake patriotism that she leaves him flat and marries Lord Somebody-or-Other, a nice Englishman, who had been hanging around for months. The two weeks' war spreads out over four years and dancer Raft comes back to Paris broken in health, but determined still to put on the Bolero—still unwritten by Ravel. On the opening night his newest partner falls to show up and good old Carole, who is in the audience, rushes in to take her place. They dance in a blaze of glory, but George's war weakened heart plays out and he dies as he would like to have lived—with the applause of admiring ringers in his ears. "Bolero" is a fine and entertaining picture with Raft scoring heavily as a most artistic dancer. The Bolero music provides a handsome setting even if Ravel didn't get around to composing it until some time later.

Fun in Beauty Shoppe.
"HIPS, HIPS, HOORAY." Wheeler and Woolsey's latest bit of nonsense — and their last picture, but one, together — at the St. Louis is more or less fully described by the title. The two knockabout comedians, who are going to split up soon after years of team work, this time are a couple of messes show fakers who get tied up with Dorothy Lee and Thelma Todd in a beauty parlor business and from then on the fun is fast, and sometimes furious. Nothing very much happens except that there is some good singing by Ruth Etting and one or two others and the whole thing is just made for laughing purposes. It accomplishes that aim well enough. On the same bill is a four-reel travel shot of a bard in so put out at his fake patriotism that she leaves him flat and marries Lord Somebody-or-Other, a nice Englishman, who had been hanging around for months. The two weeks' war spreads out over four years and dancer Raft comes back to Paris broken in health, but determined still to put on the Bolero—still unwritten by Ravel. Connie Fools Him.
BY the simple process of turning blonde—a trick accomplished by taking off a brunette wig which she wears early in the picture—Connie Bennett, who is married to Franchot Tonne, is making her debut in an English speaking role. The other is Elisabeth Bergner, the diminutive Viennese favorite, who is scoring a big hit in Margaret Kennedy's play "Escape Me Never." Cochran announced recently at an American luncheon at which "The Bergners" as she is called, was guest of honor, that she will make an American debut next.

War in the Desert.
A REALLY fine picture of the week is "The Lost Patrol," at the Fox, but the fact that it has an all male cast will probably work against its attaining any great popularity. It is the story of a small British detachment lost, during the World War, in the desert of Mesopotamia. Hemmed in by an invisible force of Arabs, the soldiers are picked off one by one until only Victor McLaglen is left. By a trick he brings the enemy out into the open and mows them down with a machine gun just as a rescuing party arrives. The story is intense and thrilling and has been splendidly made and perfectly played by a cast which includes, as well as McLaglen, Reginald Denny, Wallace Ford, Boris Karloff and J. M. Kerrigan. "Bitter Sweet," Noel Coward's operetta in film form, is also on the bill.

Ballet Russe in Added Program at The Odeon Today

THE St. Louis Symphony Society will present the Monte Carlo Ballet Russe and the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra together in a special matinee program at the Odeon at 2:30 o'clock this afternoon. An entirely new ballet, "Beach," the "Petrouchka," which was given Friday evening, and the Polovtsian Dances from "Prince Igor" will constitute the special program. The last was also the colorful conclusion of Friday evening's performance here.

"Beach" is called a ballet of the open air—a comedy of the Riviera. In it modern bathers of the Monte Carlo beach, an Oriental rajah and his consort, American sailors out for a gay time, modern mermaids, a rug vendor, the Rose-White Maid and the swimmer, mingle and pass in a gay romance.

About David Lichine as the Swimmer and Irina Baranova as the Rose-White Maid, the romance is woven. Leonide Massine, the rug vendor, the Rose-White Maid and the swimmer, mingle and pass in a gay romance.

As in the other performances, the entire St. Louis Symphony Orchestra will assist in the pit.

Hoofers in Cinema History

Revival in Interest in the Dance on Stage and Screen Brings to Mind the Fact That the Motion Pictures Had Their Start in More or Less Grude Reproductions of the Fast Steppers—Carmencita, Ruth St. Denis and Annabelle Among the First Film Subjects.

WHAT with the Ballet Russe finishing its engagement at the Odeon this afternoon, Ted Shawn and his male troupe going into their dances tonight and tomorrow evening at the Little Theater, and with Sally Rand having just wound up a week of a thoroughly artistic and not at all immoral affair at a local picture palace—she complained to the writer that he had ruined her reputation here by "putting pants on her" in his review—St. Louis has seen more grand and lofty stepping in the last few days than it has in many seasons.

The motion pictures are inclining that way, too. "Bolero," here this week, is a case in point with the same Miss Rand displaying her ostrich fans to advantage in the film. As a matter of fact the movies really got their start by way of the hoofers back in 1893 when Henry Heyl of Columbus, O., invented a machine called the Phasmatope. It carried thin glass positive pictures, mounted radially on a wheel which exposed them intermittently to the light rays of a magic lantern. This invention had a shutter and ratchet and pawl mechanism which produced all of the mechanical effects necessary to the proper projection of pictures.

For a subject, Heyl and a dancing partner were photographed in six positions of the waltz.

The pictures were reduced in printing to positives on glass little larger than a postage stamp. Each picture was printed three times and each turn of the wheel gave three turns of the waltz with the eighteen prints. Orchestral music was synchronized and 1600 persons paid $350 for the world premiere presentation of this feature.

ONE may now skip to the years 1893-4 when Thomas Edison had perfected his Kinetoscope or peep-hole and was ready to make a few fifty-foot subjects for introduction to the world. Among the first films taken was of Mae Lukas, solo dancer of "A Gaiety Girl," a current stage hit playing at Daly's theater in New York.

This dancing act is of significance since it was the first production of a person in rapid motion for motion pictures of any type. Miss Lukas, with Maggie Croeland and Lucy Murray did the carnival dance from the show for the Kinetoscope.

These early days of the film also show that in 1894 Miss Ruth Dennis was photographed in a dancing subject titled "Dance." This same girl afterwards became Ruth St. Denis of dance fame, and the wife to Ted Shawn who is in St. Louis today.

Then in 1895 came the first queen of the movies, a Spanish dancer. Dancing as a subject for the Kinetoscope was a favorite since it could be recorded in the confines of the immobile camera. Also, New York was as dance mad then as since. The famous Oriental dance had just been brought to that city and in 1895 there arrived in New York one Carmencita, a Spanish dancer who created a sensation on Broadway. She was drafted into the films and performed before the Kinetograph, as the camera was called, at West Orange, N. J. Since thousands of fans in other cities had heard of Carmencita, they took advantage of the opportunity to see her in peep-show and the popularity of the machine increased.

In the same year came the first colored film, also due to the efforts of a dancer. She was Annabelle Moore, appearing in music halls as Annabelle, the-Dancer. She did a serpentine dance, waiting endless yards of silken draperies. On the stage, her act was heightened by changing shafts of colored lights thrown upon her.

After Annabelle had performed a fifty-foot reel version of her dance at the Edison studios, many of the prints were tinted by hand.

IN the middle of September, 1895, Thomas Alva Edison and C. Francis Jenkins had perfected a projection machine and opened a show at Atlanta, Ga., at the Cotton States Exposition. The stellar picture on the program was the Annabelle the-Dancer film, in colors, secured from the Edison Kinetoscope.

Spectators were skeptical about the bold announcement that inside the tent were living pictures and so the show was opened to the public with admission payable on leaving—if satisfied. It also is interesting to note that the moment the lights were turned out for the show, a riot broke out in the audience, the people believing that this was merely a ruse to pick their pockets.

All of this led up to Edison's own invention, the Vitaphone, which on April 3, 1896, was demonstrated to the press at the Edison plant in West Orange. It consisted only of Annabelle-the-Dancer and a shot of the English derby.

This pre-showing built up interest for the first film premiere. It was held at Koster and Bial's Music Hall, Thirty-fourth Street, Herald Square, on April 23, 1896. Pictures shown on a 20-foot screen showed a dancing number in which several dancers took part, a dash of a prize fight, the surf at Dover, England, and several other short subjects.

And from that early date until the present, the dance has remained a prominent figure in motion pictures.

Play for Children Cast Selected for The Little Theater

The first play to be presented by the New Toy Theater Guild for children will be "Wonders of Woodland," a humorous fantasy by Margaret Keane. The play is in rehearsal now, and will be open to the public on Friday night, March 23, and Saturday afternoon, March 24, at the Toy Theater on Boyle and Olive.

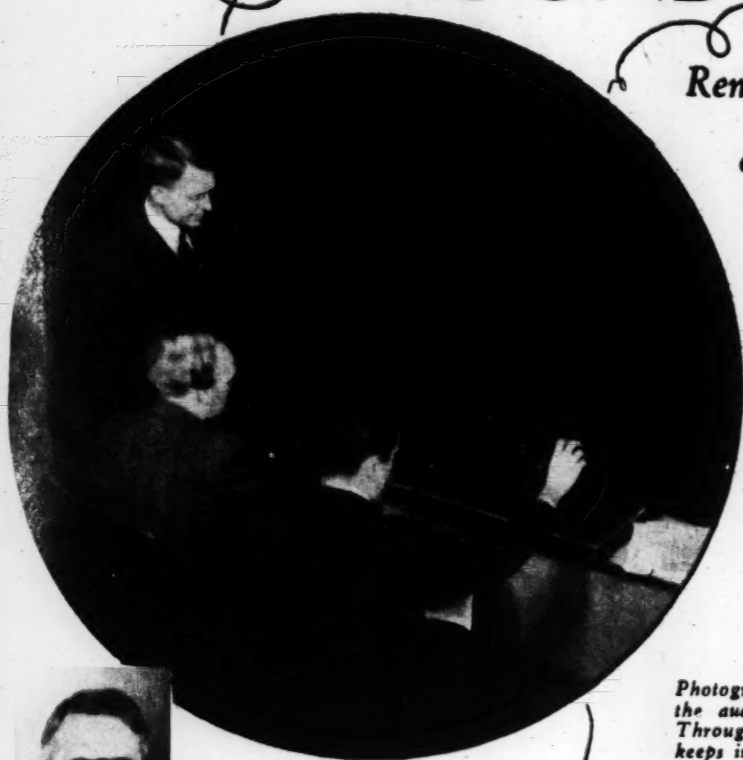

Mrs. G. A. Buder Jr., formerly of the Toy Theater Players, is general chairman of the organization, and Mrs. Julius Klueber, who coaches plays for various institutions, is director.

NEW YORK.

IN the stage of the auditorium of the Engineering Societies' Building a bugler blew a few notes, lowered his trumpet and walked off into the wings. But the sound of a bugle continued to float out to the audience from the place where the player had stood. Presently it moved across the stage to the wings opposite those in which the bugler had disappeared, and ceased.

A tap dancer appeared. After a few steps he left the stage. But the rhythmic tapping of dancing feet still came from behind the footlights—as if H. G. Wells' "Invisible Man" was capering there in one of his fits of crazy prankishness. The spectral steps proceeded back and forth across the stage, then died away in the wings.

Orchestral music came from the vacant set, music with its various parts distinctly localized. From one side of the stage the notes of a French horn would occasionally emerge out of the blend of instruments, from the other side would come a solo measure from a violin. The full range of pitch was audible. At times the volume of sound was that of a small orchestra, then it would swell until it seemed that 5000 musicians must be bowing and blowing with might and main, and the walls of the building trembled.

A buzzer sounded in the quiet auditorium. The sound became louder and louder. It grew like something in a nightmare. It achieved the magnitude of the din of a hundred boiler factories. The steel and concrete building shook and its windows rattled. Men in the audience—engineers—looked about uneasily. Several women hurried out. It was as if an unbearable weight had been lifted from body and mind when the noise died away.

The sound of an airplane engine was heard on the empty stage. It crossed the footlights, and people in the audience looked upward involuntarily as if they expected to see a plane circling above them. They saw nothing, but for several minutes they continued to hear, moving about overhead, the roar of ghostly motors. The same sort of thing happened with a tambourine—that is, the tinkling of the instrument could be heard here and there on the stage and above the heads of the audience, but no tambourine was visible.

Then there was a play—a phantom play in which the actors were disembodied voices. There was nothing to see; on the bare stage was nothing but sound. Characters were identified by their voices, and their movements and significant bits of "business" were made plain by the placing of sounds—door slamming at right, footsteps going from front to rear of the stage, and the like. The action was followed without difficulty.

This program of weird goings-on was not a spiritualistic seance or a magician's performance. It was a demonstration of the results of years of scientific research, a dramatic presentation of the newest developments in the electrical transmission of sound. It was given by the Bell Telephone Laboratories before the annual winter convention of the American Institute of Electrical Engineers. The demonstration was in charge of Dr. Harvey Fletcher, director of acoustical research at the laboratories, the chief figure in the work which has made possible the new sound effects.

Three important advancements in sound transmission were shown: reproduction of sound in a complete frequency range, a complete volume range and in "auditory perspective." The combination makes it possible for a person to hear music or other sound, brought to him electrically from a distance, as well—as completely—as he could hear it if he were where the sound originated—even better in some cases.

The frequency range is concerned with pitch and harmonics, which are measured by rate of vibration; the number of cycles a second. A good ear can detect notes of as low as 16 cycles and as high as 16,000. The highest note on a piano has a fundamental frequency of about 4000 cycles. On a musical instrument each note has a fundamental tone, which governs the pitch, and certain harmonics. The latter furnish the quality of the music and enable a listener to distinguish one instrument from another when both are playing the same note. The harmonics, so essential a part of music, have higher frequencies than their fundamental tones, and ordinary transmission does not loudness, of sound. To measure this attribute scientists have worked out a unit called a decibel. A whisper at a distance of four feet is rated at 20 decibels, the noise of a pneumatic riveting hammer at 100. A large symphony orchestra has a range of about 70 decibels. Since decibels are calculated on a logarithmic basis, 60 decibels, for example, being much more than twice as loud as 30; the greatest sound such an orchestra makes has 10,000,000 times the volume of its smallest sound.

Radio and sound picture systems are unable to reproduce truly the loudest bits of a symphony orchestra's music. But the new apparatus does it easily. Furthermore, it can magnify the volume tremendously. In the recent demonstration here, the orchestra used was composed of 30 musicians, but the volume was stepped up at times to the amount that would have been produced by a 5000-piece orchestra; it reached a power of 110 decibels. And the sound of the buzzer was increased to a volume of 120 decibels. The volume can be controlled, increased or decreased at will. Thus, if a soloist is singing with an orchestra, he may use a separate microphone, transmission line and loud speaker, and his voice may be made louder in passages where the orchestra might drown him out if normal volume were used for both.

reproduce all these overtones. The average radio transmission, for example, reproduces a range of about six octaves, but the new apparatus has a range of about nine octaves or from 35 to 16,000 cycles—sufficient to transmit faithfully all the richness and beauty in music.

The second improvement, increasing the volume range, pertains to the power, or Curtis Bok.

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch
Sunday Magazine

PHILADELPHIA. IT HAS been widely suggested of late that the public may look out for a new book one of these days under the title of "The Sovietization of Curtis Bok." It is true that no such work has been announced by any publisher and nobody has even reported seeing the manuscript. But a feeling prevails hereabouts that such a book by the son of the man who wrote "The Americanization of Edward Bok" would be peculiarly fitting and appropriate and in full accord with the facts. Because Curtis Bok, scion of the famous Philadelphia family and co-heir of a fortune of $16,000,000, has openly and admittedly swung so far to the left in his political philosophy that his Sovietization is regarded as a fact accomplished and all that remains to make it as complete as the Americanization of his father is the writing of a book about it.

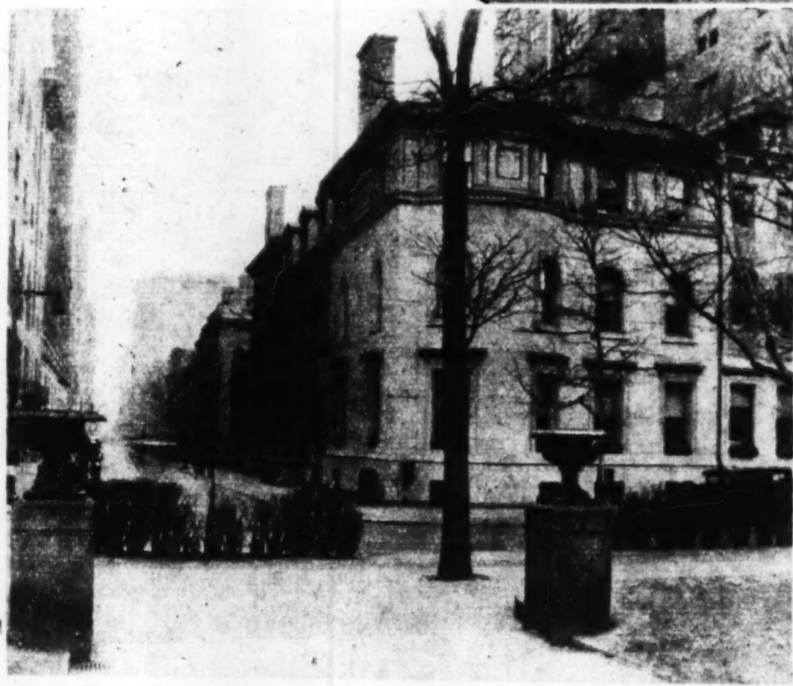

It strikes observers as not only extraordinary, but significant, that this young man, son of the millionaire Edward Bok and grandson of the millionaire, Cyrus H. K. Curtis, bred and born a capitalist, should revolt so far as to declare, as he did recently, that "the terrible spread between terrible wealth on the one hand and terrible poverty on the other must be narrowed." He says this very emphatically, and goes on further to say that the Russians not only realize better than we do the necessity for narrowing this spread, but are actually doing something about it. "Watch Russia," is his injunction to American youth. "Russia is accomplishing things worthy of imitation."

Already this iconoclastic rich man, heir to millions left by his father and trustee of more millions left by his grandfather, has felt some of the consequences of his radicalism. Since his interest in Soviet ideals became of prime importance to him he has been divorced by his socially prominent wife and he has been prohibited from addressing a group of high school boys in his native city because the school authorities were afraid—and said so—that such an address would cause the spread of Communist ideas in the schools. Undaunted by these reverses, he came right back with announcement of a plan to take the entire Philadelphia Symphony Orchestra on a tour of the U. S. S. R.

Bok openly advocated recognition of Soviet Russia long before the United States Government undertook such a step. And for a long time he has appealed for a better understanding of the Communist spirit. People who call Russia a "hell ruled by despots and tyrants," he declares are a "bunch of blithering idiots." He likes to point to the fact that Russia has launched the greatest drive against ignorance that the world has ever known and thinks it would be a good idea for this country to follow Russia's example in that respect if in no other. Altogether, he is "sold" on the Russian idea. And he considers his five months spent with the Tovarichi (comrades) in the Soviet Union a great adventure.

This unconventional, very spectacular stand taken by the 35-year-old W. Curtis Bok is not a complete surprise to those who have followed his career closely. His famous father was a man of originality of thought and action and had a great deal of courage. He came to this country from Holland as a poor boy when the Bok family fortune had been completely lost. Starting with nothing, he educated himself and became editor of the Ladies' Home Journal at the age of 25. Edward Bok then married Mary Louise Curtis, the daughter of Cyrus Curtis, and from that time on his renown grew. He wrote a number of books, notably "Why I Believe in Poverty" and "The Americanization of Edward Bok," which won a Pulitzer prize. He endowed many worthy philanthropies, and in 1924 he composed a peace anthem, called "Our U. S. A.," which, harmonized and orchestrated by Leopold Stokowski, began with these lines:

"In ringing voice we sing of thee,
Our land where freedom reigns."

When Edward Bok died in 1930, he left his estate of more than $16,000,000 to his widow and his two sons, Carey and Curtis Bok. Curtis Bok followed his father's footsteps in some respects: he became president of the Philadelphia Forum, a lecture organization, and head of the American Foundation, both institutions founded by Edward Bok. He was also made vice-president of the Philadelphia Orchestra Association, thus proving that he shared with his mother, who endowed the Curtis Institute of Music, a love of the arts.

But fundamentally Curtis Bok had had independent ideas from early youth. A student at Williams College when the war broke out, he left college and enlisted in the regular navy, rising from a quartermaster to become the youngest full Lieutenant in the United States Navy. After the war, he entered the University of Virginia Law School and on his graduation started to practice law in Philadelphia. He surprised Quaker society by becoming the youngest member of the Board of Trustees of the Eastern Penitentiary after a shakeup at "Cherry Hill" and expressed a desire to live as a convict for two weeks for the purpose of gaining a real insight into a prisoner's life and environment.

Six feet two, personable and extremely eligible, young Bok was much sought after by mothers and daughters. It was no surprise when he became engaged to Anne B. Townsend, leading hockey player in the country, champion tennis, basketball and squash player. But that marriage never took place, and only recently the popular Miss Townsend announced her engagement to Livingston Smith, an architect of Philadelphia.

ROMANCE did come Bok's way, however, and in 1924 he married Margaret Adams Plummer, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William T. Plummer of Ardmore. All seemed to go well. In the course of time the couple had three children. Mrs. Curtis Bok became interested in modern education and her husband was made an assistant District Attorney. They both enjoyed aviation and Curtis Bok received a pilot's license in the Aeronautics Division of the Commerce Department.

Then suddenly in the summer of 1932 Curtis Bok, who had been a leading advocate of Soviet recognition for some time, set sail with his wife for the land of the Soviets. In the fall Mrs. Bok returned home, but Curtis Bok sent word that he had resigned his position as Assistant District Attorney and was going to live the life of a laborer among the people of the Soviet Union.

There he stayed for five months, talking, working and spending his time entirely with the Russian masses. In January of 1933 he returned to New York and as this millionaire walked down the gangplank, his battered cap, his old brown suit, his khaki shirt and flannel tie expressed more clearly than words what his sympathies were. Under his arm he carried a brown cardboard box that contained a formal suit of evening clothes which a Bond street tailor had made for him on short notice when he found he had to attend a formal function in London. Though Bok was one of the richest passengers on the liner, he carried only two pieces of hand luggage.

When Bok was asked why he had gone to Russia and lived there like a workman, he answered:

"I saw all there was to be seen from an automobile in my first tour, which included a visit to Leningrad, Moscow, Stalingrad, Dneproprostol, Odessa and Kiev. Then I wanted to study the conditions as a Russian sees them. To live in Russia is to understand the Russians. I made a lot of fine friends there. Don't let anyone tell you that the Russian people are depressed or sullen."

"I got a job in a candy factory near Moscow, working on an eight-hour day and six-day week schedule, making candy biscuits. It was hot and the work was hard. My salary was 80 rubles a month, the equivalent of $40. I lived with a working-class family, and had a room the size of a closet, with a borrowed bed, table and chair. The workmen in the factory were all friendly, good-natured and not at all suspicious."

"After a month I moved to Leningrad and, without using influence through any of my friends, I got a job in three weeks as a chauffeur with a Soviet tourist agency. My pay increased from 80 to 250 rubles a month. After several months of boarding and working with proletarians, I came home, full of admiration for the zeal of the Russian youth, who feel convinced that they know the way out."

As to the question of the United States adopting the Communist form of government, Bok said: "I don't see that we can adopt the Russian system as a whole, but we can learn a lot from them, and we have a lot to learn. We will not go Communist, however, until we have nothing to lose. Remember, Russia was a nation of serfs, a desperate people."

AS FOR the idea that there is despotism there, it is a ridiculous accusation. You can't keep a Russian from talking, for he is the most talkative fellow in the world. The police are watchful and you cannot roam Communist and the Government there any more safely than you can roam capitalism and the Government here. The Russians hate war and want peace, but they do have a formidable army."

On October 16, Curtis Bok made his first public address concerning his Russian trip. He advocated recognition, declaring that since the time of Thomas Jefferson it had been the policy of the United States to recognize a foreign government that was stable and showed its ability to exist.

Though Mrs. Curtis Bok had lost her husband at the boat when he returned from Russia, she did not make any public comments on his "adventure." There began to be rumors of domestic discord. Mrs. Bok continued to show an interest in educational matters: she organized feeding stations for poor children; but she did not express herself on the Russian situation.

Then one fine day Quaker society (Concluded on Page 7.)

HE M But Tracy

By a Special Correspondent

GLORY and glamour have had their day and passed out of the life of Tracy Richardson. Since the end of that romantic period that marked the high tide of professional soldiers of fortune Richardson, one of the most glamorous of them all, has been on the down grade and now he is at the bottom of the slope. News dispatches recently stated that the man who once made and unmade Central American Presidents, now a sock and stocking peddler, had been arrested in Denver as was being taken back to Fort Worth, Texas, where he is wanted on an charge of using the mails to defraud in connection with a gold mine promotion scheme.

A sock and stocking peddler! And in jail at that! It is a dismal windup for a man who has lived through the incredible adventures and the romantic exploits that were his. He started his career as a soft-spoken and bashful boy from a Southern Missouri town, but he became the greatest machine gunner of his time. Single-handed he captured Managua, capital of Nicaragua, in the revolution that drove Zelaya from the presidency and placed Estrada in his stead. With Sam Dyer, who was described by General Hines of the United States Army as "the greatest Jewish fighting man since Joshua," he wiped out a whole regiment of Nicaraguan Federal soldiers. He was the only man who ever jammed the muzzle of a pistol into the midriff of Pancho Villa of Mexico, made him apologize publicly, and live to tell the tale. He was the private scout of General Frederick Funston at Vera Cruz in 1914. He fought with the Princess Pats of Canada in World War. He won his commission as a British naval aviator, and then as an American naval aviator after United States entered the war. His body bears the scars of 16 wounds, has fought under six flags. But he is merely a stocking peddler, jam with the law. His inglorious life is characteristic of the fate of some of the greatest of the breed, soldiers of fortune! See what became some of the others.

William Walker, first and foremost of them, died before a firing squad at Truxillo, Spanish Honduras, in 1856. He had made himself President of Nicaragua. General Lee Christmas, made and unmade Presidents in Spanish Honduras, died in 1923 in New Orleans, in a charity ward of the Infirmary. His friends buried him. His widow worked as a waitress behind a sandwich shop counter. Dreyfus died in Los Angeles, penniless.

HE MADE and UNMADE PRESIDENTS

But Tracy Richardson — Once Known as the Most Glamorous of All American Soldiers of Fortune —
Is Now in Jail Awaiting Trial on a Charge of Fraud.

By a Special Correspondent

GLORY and glamour have had their day and passed out of the life of Tracy Richardson. Since the end of that romantic period that marked the high tide of professional soldiers of fortune, Richardson, one of the most glamorous of them all, has been on the down-grade and now he is at the bottom of the slope. News dispatches recently stated that the man who once made and unmade Central American Presidents, now a sock and stocking peddler, had been arrested in Denver and was being taken back to Fort Worth, Texas, where he is wanted on an old charge of using the mails to defraud in connection with a gold mine promotion scheme.

A sock and stocking peddler! And in jail at that! It is a dismal windup for a man who has lived through the incredible adventures and the romantic exploits that were his. He started his career as a soft-spoken and bashful boy from a Southern Missouri town, but he became the greatest machine gunner of his time. Single-handed he captured Managua, capital of Nicaragua, in the revolution that drove Zelaya from the presidency and placed Estrada in his stead. With Sam Dreben, who was described by General Hines of the United States Army as "the greatest Jewish fighting man since Joshua," he wiped out a whole regiment of Nicaraguan Federal soldiers. He was the only man who ever jammed the muzzle of a pistol into the nostril of Pancho Villa of Mexico, made him apologize publicly, and lived to tell the tale. He was the private scout of General Frederick Funston at Vera Cruz in 1914. He fought with the Princess Pats of Canada in the World War. He won his commission as a British naval aviator, and then as an American naval aviator after the United States entered the war. His body bears the scars of 16 wounds. He has fought under six flags. But now he is merely a stocking peddler, in a jam with the law. His inglorious final act is characteristic of the fate that somehow stalks most of the breed. Soldiers of fortune! See what became of some of the others.

William Walker, first and foremost of them, died before a firing squad in Tehuacan, Spanish Honduras, in 1860. He had made himself President of Nicaragua. General Lee Christmas, who made and unmade Presidents in Spanish Honduras, died in 1923 in New Orleans, in a charity ward of Toussaint Hospital. His friends buried him. His widow worked as a waitress behind a sandwich shop counter. Sam Dreben died in Los Angeles, penniless. General Gabe Conrad is a traveling salesman for a brewery. Guy Molloy is operating a brewery in San Pedro Sula, Spanish Honduras. Long since even the men who campaigned with them have lost all knowledge of picturesque lesser lights of those days such as Casey the Gunner, Charley the Swede, Eagle-eye Pat. And, vaguely, those who had known him had thought Tracy Richardson was "somewhere out around Spokane" until the news spotlight revealed him in Denver, a peddler of socks and stockings, wanted by the police.

Tracy Richardson's story opens back in 1908, when he was a youngster nearing 21. He had been paid off in a lump sum at the completion of a contracting job. He and his buddy started for New Orleans to kick up their heels in a little revelry. On the wharves they saw a banana boat. On impulse they bought passage. They found their tickets read "Bluefields, Nicaragua." And at Bluefields Richardson's baggage got lost. He went to the American Consul about it. The Consul's nerves were frazzled with revolutionary complications. He mistook the young tourist for another American trying to join General Gabe Conrad's famous "American Legion," recruited off tropical beaches of tough down-and-out beachcombers, and ordered him to leave the revolution-torn country by next steamer. To spite the Consul, Tracy joined the revolution. A few days later he was on his way up the Rama River with a mixed party of Americans and natives, in great Indian dugouts.

He had never seen a machine gun. In the interior he joined General Conrad, who was with the force of General Luis Mena, known as the Tiger of the Mountains.

From Charley the Swede (nobody knew his other name) Tracy Richardson learned machine-gunnery. He was "a natural." He had the eye, the co-ordination, the chilled-steel nerve.

"After a week, he could play that damned gun like a piano," General Conrad once said.

Advancing toward Granada, the column was ambushed by a Federal machine gun behind a rock rampart. It couldn't be dislodged at long distance. Richardson and Dreben began to crawl toward it with rifle and pistol. Then took place an episode that still lives in the tropics. Dreben was fat. As he crawled over a slight rise, the Federal machine-gunners sent a burst at him and inflicted a long, raking flesh wound. Dreben howled in wrath and pain.

"Hit him, Sam!" called Tracy. "They hit me," Sam called back. "Bad enough to kill you, Sam?" "Not a chance. They can't kill me. How can I die in this damned country? There ain't a Jew graveyard in Nicaragua!"

latter's pants streaming blood, flanked and shot the Federal machine-gun crew. Tracy had come through his baptism of fire unhurt.

A week later he was knocked out of the saddle by a spent bullet that didn't even break the skin.

A few days later Tracy and Sam wiped out a Nicaraguan Federal regiment. The revolutionary column had taken a town so swiftly that the telegrapher was shot before he could flash out the news. They found on his desk a telegram he had just received, notifying the town commandant that a regiment sent by President Zelaya would reach there by train that night to meet the rebels.

On the two far ends of the open plaza that fronted the train platform, Richardson and Dreben mounted two machine guns, behind sandbags, camouflaged with shrubbery. With each aiming at the end of the platform farthest from him, their line of fire was the deadly X, that, except at the exact center, gives four lines of flying bullets for charging troops to cross. With helpers and loaded belts, they crouched hidden as the military train rolled in at dusk. The regiment detoured and fell in, preparatory to marching. Richardson and Dreben opened fire. Back and forth they swept their gun muzzles. When the firing ceased, that regiment had been annihilated.

Then came the incredible episode of Tracy Richardson's single-handed capture of Managua, the capital. The revolutionists had taken Granada with desperate hand-to-hand, house-to-house fighting. They had started the long march to Managua. Tracy was riding far ahead of the column, to get away from the dust. Ahead of him he saw a city. He didn't know what it was.

HE RODE into the suburbs, a curious country boy from Missouri. Just as he saw a sign that let him know he was in Managua, a squad of Federal soldiers commanded by a young Lieutenant rushed out and surrounded him.

Cold poker bluff was his only chance. He made it table stakes. He had learned some rough-and-ready Spanish on the way up.

"I am a messenger from the commander of the revolution to your commanding General," he said calmly. "Take me to him."

The bluff worked. The Missouri youngster was taken before the military commander of Managua.

"General Luis Mena has sent me to you to give you a chance for your life," Tracy Richardson told him. "Managua is surrounded at this minute. We outnumber you ten to one. We have artillery and machine guns. You know what happened at Granada. General Mena has no desire to kill his brother Nicaraguans without need. Surrender to me and he spares your lives. Refuse and take the consequences."

The commander of Managua knew what had happened at Granada. He thought for a moment—and then surrendered the city to one Missouri kid! Tracy Richardson ordered him to assemble all his men under arms. Then, at Tracy's order, the men marched to the cuartel, piled their arms in the cells, marched out unarmed, an officer locked the cuartel and gave Tracy Richardson the key.

"The hardest job I had," he said afterward, "was to keep myself from shivering and sweating until the revolutionary column came up!"

Zelaya fled. Estrada was declared President. Tracy was given $5000 gold for his services. He speculated in Nicaraguan exchange, then fluctuating wildly, and made it $15,000. Then he sailed for New Orleans, ordered a wardrobe from the city's most expensive tailors and started a career in which wine, women and song played their time-honored parts. The $15,000 lasted two months!

"What the hell," said Tracy. "There's always a revolution on somewhere down there. They need machine-gunners."

He was right. A little later he was fighting under Lee Christmas in Spanish Honduras. When the fighting ended Manuel Bonilla was the new President. Three months later Tracy was broke again.

He joined Sam Dreben in El Paso. The Orozco-Salazar revolution was brewing in Mexico. They joined it for $500 gold a month and a $1000 bonus for each battle. They helped steal an old Civil War muzzle-loading cannon in an El Paso park and snake it across the Rio Grande. An El Paso foundry cast round iron cannon balls for it; an El Paso machine shop turned them on a lathe. Wooden wagon-axle and wheels and a wooden trail completed the artillery of that revolution, with blasting powder and miners' fuse.

WITH General Ines Salazar (once a dentist in St. Louis) in command, the column moved out of Juarez for Chihuahua. Then they moved southward. Behind the strong adobe walls of Hacienda Refugio they found a strong Federal force. They rolled up the old El Paso park cannon to a commanding position. They loaded it with a couple of buckets of blasting powder, wadded it with old newspapers, rammed in three cast-iron cannon balls. Behind their walls, the Federals watched apprehensively. Tracy lighted the fuse that fired the cannon. It exploded into a thousand pieces. It seemed almost a miracle that nobody was hurt. The cannon balls rolled all of 30 feet.

England's 'Magnificent Duke' who Sued His Niece for Libel

It Happened When Lady Sibell Lygon Wrote a Gossip Column Charging Him With Spending Too Much of His Money in France.

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine

WITH hundreds of ancient country houses up for sale, earls going into business and countesses becoming professional shopkeepers, England's aristocracy has had more than one shock in the past few years. But with all the vibrations of recent social earthquakes, nothing has reverberated more violently than one libel suit. The other day Hugh Richard Arthur Grosvenor, Duke of Westminster, filed an action against his lovely niece, Lady Sibell Lygon. Libel suits involving the aristocracy are rare enough at any time. Suits involving a Duke are even rarer. But one which finds blue-blooded uncle arrayed against blue-blooded niece, with wealth and social position massed on each side—well, its something new.

The Duke of Westminster has given society things to talk about before. He has been married three times, to begin with. He is fabulously wealthy and he has spent his money as tradition calls on a Duke to spend it. He is a member of one of the oldest families in the Empire, has a distinguished military record and is a prominent yachtsman. All in all, he is more like a member of one of the great families of Renaissance Italy than the sedate Englishman. Like Leonardi di Medici, he deserves the title, "the magnificent."

Lady Sibell Lygon, daughter of the Earl and Countess of Beauchamp, the latter being the Duke's sister, is young, charming and possessed of plenty of spirit. She has been writing a society gossip column for the Oxford and Cambridge Magazine. The lawsuit arises from an item she contributed to the Christmas issue of that publication.

The first Duchess of Westminster, who divorced the Duke in 1919.

In that issue she devoted a couple of paragraphs to her uncle, the Duke, and confessed that she had been rather shocked by his behavior.

What horrible thing had the Duke been doing? Nothing so terrible, by American standards. He had simply been spending most of his time and money in France, instead of in England. But Lady Sibell didn't think this was setting a good example, and Dukes are made to be looked up to. Perhaps, she observed, he had had his troubles in England, but he should not shirk his duty. He should put personal pettiness aside. After all, she remarked:

"Life is not all beer and skittles, even to a Duke."

So the Duke issued a writ for libel against her, and another against W. G. A. Wayte, editor of the magazine. Undaunted, the defendants promptly retained as their lawyer Norman Birkett, one of the most brilliant cross-examiners of the English bar, and prepared to fight the case.

LADY SIBELL, as it happens, has been earning her own living for quite a while. For a time she acted as "receptionist" in a fashionable women's hairdressing establishment. Then she began writing society gossip. It is whispered about London that she has become a Socialist; indeed, the article which induced the Duke to sue for libel contained this statement:

"I am Socialistic in a great many ways, and this sort of thing (the Duke's action) makes me see right in the Left."

So now Mayfair is waiting for the fireworks which are almost sure to develop when the case comes to trial.

The Grosvenor family, whose head the Duke is, has been prominent in English history for nearly 900 years. The family originated in France—its name comes from the old Norman term, "le grosvenor," meaning the chief huntsman to the hereditary Dukes of Normandy. One of these early Grosvenors came over to England with William the Conqueror in 1066, and established the noble family that has played a large part in English life ever since.

In the late nineties of the last century the present Duke was known as Lord Belgrave, heir presumptive to the dukedom held by his grandfather. He seemed to have been blessed by fortune at his birth. He was tall, handsome, intelligent, dashing in his manner, heir to a proud title and a vast fortune.

In 1899 his grandfather died, and he became Duke. He was just 20, then, and when the Boer War broke out he went to South Africa as aide-de-camp to the famous "Little Bobs"—Lord Roberts. He saw a good deal of action, narrowly escaped death, formed an intimate friendship with Winston Churchill, and returned to London, after the war, with an established reputation, ready to enjoy the good things

A Wedding in the Orchid Family

How Two Species Were Crossed at Shaw's Garden.

By KEITH KERMAN
Of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine Staff

THE Cattleya Trianae—Brasso-Cattleya Fournieri children appeared in public for the first time the other day, and were marveled at and admired. Attended by their parents, they received thousands of visitors and bore inspection gracefully and serenely, apparently unspelled by the distinction of being products of an international romance, to which five countries had contributed.

They really were very personable youngsters. Large and well-made, they yet had an appealing fragility. Their coloring was particularly lovely—delicate mauve, principally, with touches of yellow and magenta. They were handsomer than either of their parents, and had been six years a-growing. With the two elders, they formed one of the most interesting and slightly displays in the orchid show which opened January 28 at Shaw's Garden. That was the world premiere of this particular orchid hybrid.

One of the parents is a Tulipan, or Cattleya Trianae, found in the Colombian Andes in 1923 by Superintendent George Pring of Shaw's Garden. The other is a hybrid, Brasso-Cattleya Fournieri, which was grown in France and brought here in 1926. Orchids from Brazil and from Honduras were its ancestors.

The Tulipan has a dainty, symmetrical flower with mauve petals and sepals, its lip deep yellow on the interior and purplish red on the fore part. The hybrid from France is larger and the lip is more open and beautifully fringed. Its colors are less pronounced than those of the Tulipan, and its petals and sepals are rather widely separated.

In the crossing of these two plants, the Tulipan served as the "mother," or seed bearer, as it was desired that its influence be the stronger on the progeny. Pollen from the Brasso-Cattleya was placed in a small depression in the column of the Tulipan. From the mother plant, about 10 months later, fertile seeds were taken—tiny things, almost too small to be seen with the unaided eye; it takes 30,000 to equal in weight a grain of wheat. The seeds were put into flasks containing a substance composed largely of agar-agar. Also in each flask was fungus, grown on a bit of root from one of the parent plants.

After a few days the seeds turned green. Some weeks later, leaves and roots had begun to appear, and the seeds were transferred to other flasks for further growth. When the root systems seemed to be well established, the flasks—they sometimes speak of them as "incubators"—at the garden—were abandoned, and the minute growths were planted, each in a pot about the size of a thimble. Then they were moved to one of the orchid houses of the garden's arboretum at Gray Summit. Up to this time they had been laboratory wards, handled with the painstaking delicacy of laboratory technique.

At the arboretum they continued to receive very careful treatment, being sprayed to protect them from insects and fungi infection, kept in a humid atmosphere of regulated temperature, shaded from direct rays of the sun and watered in proper amount and at proper intervals. From time to time, as they grew, they were transplanted into larger pots.

Last month, when the offspring of the Colombian Tulipan and the French hybrid were a little more than six years old, they began to bloom—an event watched with intense interest by the Shaw's Garden experts. When one parent is a hybrid the results of such a cross are always uncertain.

It was soon evident that this experiment in orchid breeding was eminently successful. For, while all of the new flowers were not of equal quality—a few, in fact, were out-and-out scrubs—many were splendid blossoms which contained the best points of both parents. That, of course, was what was hoped for. These superior specimens had the large size and the open, fringed lip of the Brasso-Cattleya, the symmetrical proportions of the Tulipan and the mauve, yellow and magenta coloring of both. Another new and beautiful type of orchid had been created, another lovely combination of form and color added to Shaw's Garden's world famous treasury of flowers.

The garden has the greatest collection of show orchids in the world and is attaining notable success in creating new types of hybridization. This success, which has put the garden in the position of turning out rarities in mass production, may be attributed to the method of orchid-growing perfected by Mrs. Elinor Alberts Linder, who for a number of years was a laboratory expert at the St. Louis institution.

It was Mrs. Linder who originated the particular way of employing fungus to stimulate the growth of orchid seedlings in incubator flasks followed in much of the garden's work. In 1930 she was awarded a gold medal by the American Orchid Society; at the same time the St. Louis garden received the first prize for its exhibit. Many other prizes, of course, have been won by the orchids from Shaw's Garden.

Nearly a dozen of the garden's greenhouses are devoted to orchids, and thousands of seedlings are growing. In his report for 1933 Director George T. Moore said that 17 rare orchid hybrids grown from seed, some with as many as 100 plants, bloomed during the year at Gray Summit.

CHICAGO.
THERE was a preview, for a very limited audience, here the other day
of a movie which is in many respects unique. It is a movie which Hollywood could never duplicate, although Hollywood has tried many times.

This film was made by Chicago's most successful gangsters, and it shows their home life, their more informal and less secret business transactions, the gay, happy times they had together when once—in the more attractive playgrounds of America—they had thrown off dull care and the stresses and strains naturally attaching to the profession.

It might be classed as an education picture, particularly useful if one wanted to show the customary visitor from Mars the nature of life in the United States from 1931 to 1933, approximately the years the picture covers, police believe. Although it omits the unpleasant features incidental to the business phase of a gangster's career, it is far more successful than any gang film out of Hollywood in catching an authentic atmosphere.

And well it might, for the principal actors are Gus Winkler, Three-Fingered Jack White, William "Klondike" O'Donnell, Sam Alex, Tony Capesio, and other lesser and unidentified gunmen and attendants. With more freedom than the most fabulous Hollywood magnate commands, the scene shifts from Miami Beach to a penthouse in New York, to the Rose Bowl in Pasadena, to quaint old Cicero, the gangster's finishing school; to the Canadian north woods, to a pleasant home in what might be suburban Oak Park, to the interior of a private plane.

The police found this film in the apartment of Three-Fingered Jack White, who was shot to death not long ago by two men with whom he had been drinking in the living room of the flat. They were friends, perhaps associates, the police assume, since White was at his slippers case, in undershirt, without shoes, unarmed.

Then, as police reconstruct the crime, an argument broke out which quickly developed into a quarrel. One of the visitors must have made a move to arouse suspicion. White went into the bedroom for his gun. He was shot down as he reached for it.

The usual scenes followed, familiar in Chicago for 10 years or more. A crowd gathered outside the apartment house in Oak Park. Police cars screaming wildly. The flares of the newspaper photographers. The widow, a former night club performer, reluctant to find the tragedy. Hysterics, screams. The crowd grows. The police take away Mrs. White, her brother, Jimmy Kelly, a vaudeville performer, and a friend, Diane Anderson.
For several days all the newspapers were full of rumors and counter-rumors, some of them originating with the police.

A woman living in the apartment building selected from a group of photographs those of "Klondike" O'Donnell and Murray Humphries as the two men she had seen running out of the building after the shots were fired. Nancy White identified photographs of O'Donnell and Humphries as two men known to her as "Joe" and "Bill," who visited her husband the evening he was slain. O'Donnell, according to the newspapers, has for years "headed a gang of gunmen in western suburbs of the city, is known as head of a gambling and vice syndicate." O'Donnell, Humphries and White were closely associated in various phases of labor racketeering. They are known to have had a large part in the operation of the Trucking and Transportation Exchange, called familiarly the "T. N. T.," long under investigation by the State's Attorney's office.

One rumor had it that White had "double-crossed" a partner in crime, James "Fur" Sammons, who, after an extensive career as a fugitive from justice, has been sentenced to life imprisonment in Indiana as an habitual criminal.
The story went that Sammons and White shared a joint safe deposit box, in which was some $80,000 in currency, the profit chiefly from one large hold-up, that of the International Harvester Company's payroll. Sammons, in jail, called on White for a considerable share of this money, with which to prepare his legal defense. White decided to keep the whole sum.

THERE were enough reasons why White should have been killed. He had outlived the average gangster's span of life, was in fact a hoary 43, with 25 years of crime behind him. It is worth while glancing briefly at the career of this amateur movie maker.

Still in his teens, he left an Iowa farm, where he had had two fingers mangled in a threshing machine, to find excitement and easy money in the city. He banded together with five other toughs to form what police called "the dead-shot gang of doormat thieves." They stole milk from doorsteps and mail from mail boxes in the beginning, graduating to major crimes
as they grew tougher and older.
George "Red" Barker was one of the most notorious members of this gang, most of whom got into the big money.

White was sentenced to Joliet Penitentiary in 1919 for robbery and was paroled in 1925. Arrested in Kansas City in the summer of the same year, he succeeded in eluding the law. On December 13, 1925, he shot and killed

He was twice tried and man William McBride, a witness to the Pflaume murder, had his jaw shot off by machine-gun fire, just before he was to tes-trials. At last, in May of 1932, the case was not prossed. Sentenced to a year in jail and a fine of $200 in May of 1933, he tied the case up in the courts, where it was dragging its leisurely way when he was slain. He was indicted on a conspiracy charge in connection with the "T. N. T." investigation, one reason why he was hiding out in Oak Park.

But he left a record behind him which throws more light upon the life

Jack White was not a very skillful amateur movie maker. He simply bought thousands of feet of film and he or his friends ground it through his standard-size movie camera, to take whatever happened to be before the lens. White's vanity is obvious. He was fond of wearing slickly tailored ing an actor as yet unidentified.

clothes, strolling with an easy assurance within the camera's range. When he and his companions stepped into a chartered plane it was with all the nonchalance of a group of big business men off for an important directors' meeting.

Or take them at Miami Beach. The background is a large, handsome house in the Italian style, with a broad expanse of private beach. There are many shots of a child in a bathing suit, playing in the sand. White, in immaculate flannels and sport shoes, walks across the terrace of the house.
In the driveway is one of the several Lincoln cars that are part of the White menage, all shiny with chromium plated gadgets.

There are other shots of the Roman pool adjoining the Roney-Plaza Hotel.
Others of the Seminole Indians. Again White and his friends are apparently aboard a small motor yacht, cruising along an inland waterway, with views of a swampy shore and low hanging palmettoes. Here, as in later reels, there are two or three figures whom the police have as yet been unable to identify. It is believed this was made in January, 1933.

A party on a penthouse terrace is the next sequence in this cinematic history of a big shot. The terrace is furnished in ultra modern furniture and the camera catches the glittering skyline of New York, the Chrysler Building, the Empire
State, all the familiar peaks and pinnacles. This sequence has a high degree of sex appeal in the person of a platinum blonde who looks something like Jean Harlow. There is a table covered with bottles and glasses and dishes with ice cubes. Everybody is a little high. There is much horseplay. The blonde sits first on the lap of Klondike O'Donnell and then on the lap of White, and kisses them.

Assistant State's Attorney Charles Dougherty is of the opinion that this part of the film was made on top of the Hotel New Yorker. He is checking the hotel records to discover whether or not White may have been there.
Later the party is shown in a high-powered motor launch in the Hudson River, with the Bear Mountain Bridge in the distance. The blonde has her arms around White. One of the men is careful to keep his face covered with his hat, and this is characteristic of other figures who come into one or another of the nine reels. Dougherty points out the way in which White apparently had contacts at every place he went.

PERHAPS the most revealing scenes are those taken in Cicero, the Chicago suburb which has for so long been dominated by the Capone gang, first under Al Capone himself and since his imprisonment under the lieutenants who took his place. The scenes in Cicero show notorious criminals sauntering through the streets, in some instances the guns they carry apparent.

There are quite a number of Cicero shots made in and around the garage of Joseph Bergl, who, according to Chicago detectives, is said to have created the armored cars that have been the pride and joy of many a gangster's heart. Here, in one sequence, are a group of men, White and one or two other big shots, the rest of them
"punks," loitering against White's big car, laughing, clowning. Along comes a little fellow, unidentified by the police, pulls out a thick roll of bills and begins to pay off the hangers-on. This is on the sidewalk of a main street in Cicero.

According to detectives who have studied the film, Bergl is one of the men who appear in this sequence.
Down the street come six young girls dressed in slovenly pajamas. The camera is trained on them for a moment.
They laugh and call back, the men grin and nudge each other. So life goes on in Cicero.

There are quite a few scenes of rather homely family existence, made,
it is believed, in a Chicago suburb.
The characters are a man and wife in the thirties, their little boy about 3, an elderly woman and an elderly man.

MOVIE DRESSOGRAPHS

LILIAN HARVEY

A different movie star will make his or her appearance in this space every week. Accompanying will be three costumes this particular player wore in various roles played on the screen. Cut out the player and paste on cardboard. Then cut out the costumes. Now dress the star in her proper outfits, being careful to assemble each costume correctly.

This week's star is Lilian Harvey. The three sets of costumes shown here were worn by her in these roles in the following movies: Suzanne in "I Am Suzanne"; Lili in "My Lips Betray," and Loooleo Blake in "My Weakness."

Next week: Ricardo Cortez.

GRUMPY—An old bear who can't go to sleep.
HOKUS POKUS—A great magician.
PAT O'POSSUM—A mischievous youngster.
TOM O'POSSUM—Pat's twin brother.
RAMSEY—A hard-headed old ram.

Grumpy, who is in the habit of sleeping through the long winter months, is still wide awake. All winter long he has tried everything he could think of to make him sleep, but without success. What will he do? He tramps through the woods asking himself this question. During his walk today he sees the O'Possum twins and Hokus Pokus standing around a hat. Suddenly Hokus Pokus waves his wand and, yelling some magic words, draws a live rabbit out of his hat as

THE PLAY BEGINS

PAT O'POSSUM—Gosh! That's wonderful.
TOM O'POSSUM—Gee, what a wonderful thing! Can you make anything you want come out of that hat?

HOKUS POKUS—Anything. Rabbits, ponies, dogs, goats, sheep, an idea.
(Grumpy, who has been listening, suddenly has an idea.)
GRUMPY—(Excitedly.) Did you say you could make sheep come out of your hat?
HOKUS POKUS—Certainly, I can.
GRUMPY—Then please make some come jumping out of it now. I haven't slept all winter. Maybe I could if I had some sheep to count. I haven't they do, only they are little lambs. Grumpy gets down on his hands and knees and starts to count. The O'Possum twins, who had intended to ask Hokus Pokus to give them a pony, resent this. They go to one side to talk things over.
TOM O'POSSUM—I'd like to pay him back for spoiling our fun.
PAT O'POSSUM—I would, too. Let's tell Ramsey that Grumpy is acting like he is asleep so that the lambs will come close enough for him to catch them.
TOM O'POSSUM—Gee, that's swell. (So they run and tell Ramsey, and after a while, just as Grumpy finally gets to sleep, Ramsey rushes in.)
RAMSEY—So you think you're smart, don't you? Trying to catch baby sheep. Well, there's more than one way to use your head and this is my way—

WITHIN A YEAR THE DUKE MARRIED FOR A SECOND TIME, HIS WIFE BEING VIOLET MARY GERALDINE, DAUGHTER OF SIR WILLIAM NELSON, A WEALTHY SHIP OWNER. AFTER SOME YEARS OF WEDDED HAPPINESS, MAYFAIR SOCIETY BEGAN TO HEAR RUMORS OF AN EXTRA-TRANGEMENT.

THEN THE DUCHESS FILED A PETITION FOR A DIVORCE. SHE TESTIFIED THAT EARLY IN 1924 THEY WERE LIVING ON ONE OF THEIR TWO YACHTS, FLYING CLOUD, ANCHORED OFF MONACO. SHE SAID THE DUKE WOULD LEAVE THE YACHT EVERY AFTERNOON ABOUT 4 O'CLOCK AND RETURN BETWEEN 6 AND 8:30 THE NEXT MORNING. SHE CAME TO THE CONCLUSION THAT HE WAS ASSOCIATING WITH A WOMAN.

SHE BEGGED HIM TO GIVE THIS UP. HE BECAME VERY ANGRY AND SAID HE WOULD LIVE AS HE LIKED. HE TOLD HER FLATLY HE WAS LIVING WITH SEVERAL WOMEN. SHE GOT HER DIVORCE IN 1926.

IN 1930 HE GAVE SOCIETY A SURPRISE WHEN HE ANNOUNCED HIS ENGAGEMENT TO LOELLA PONSONBY, DAUGHTER OF SIR FREDERICK PONSONBY, WHO HAS HELD THE OFFICE OF TREASURER TO THE KING AND KEEPER OF THE PRIVY PURSE, UNDER BOTH KING EDWARD AND KING GEORGE.

of life which his wealth and position could bring.
No fairy tale prince ever had a fairer prospect. He was one of the richest men in England. He owned 60,000 acres in Scotland and in Cheshire, England. He also owned 600 acres of the most valuable property in the heart of London. He received in rents a sum estimated at $1,250,000 a year.
His ancestral seat in Cheshire, Eaton Hall, is 300 years old. Golden gates stand at the entrance; it contains a library of 10,000 volumes, priceless paintings by old masters, and has the finest stables in Great Britain. Here were bred the famous racehorse Faith, which won The Oaks nine times in the eighteenth century; Ormonde, which remained unbeaten throughout his career and was one of the greatest racehorses of all time; and Bend Or, another famous winner.

MANY celebrated people have been entertained by the Duke in his house, including King George of England and Alfonso of Spain. In London the Duke had two more magnificent homes, Grosvenor House and Bourdon House, the latter occupying nearly all of a city block. A few years ago the Duke tired of maintaining the Bourdon House and sold it to Lord Leverhulme, the soap king, for $2,500,000.

In 1901 Westminster embarked upon the first of his three matrimonial ventures. His bride was his boyhood sweetheart, Constance Cornwallis-West.

They had a son and heir who died when he was 5. This loss dealt the Duke a blow from which he never really recovered. They had also two handsome daughters, who are prominent in the society of today.

In 1919 the Duke's first marriage was dissolved, divorce being granted the Duchess on the grounds of her husband's desertion and misconduct.

Within a year the Duke married for a second time, his wife being Violet Mary Geraldine, daughter of Sir William Nelson, a wealthy ship owner. After some years of wedded happiness, Mayfair society began to hear rumors of an extra-arrangement.

Then the Duchess filed a petition for a divorce. She testified that early in 1924 they were living on one of their two yachts, Flying Cloud, anchored off Monaco. She said the Duke would leave the yacht every afternoon about 4 o'clock and return between 6 and 8:30 the next morning. She came to the conclusion that he was associating with a woman.

She begged him to give this up. He became very angry and said he would live as he liked. He told her flatly he was living with several women. She got her divorce in 1926.

In 1930 he gave society a surprise when he announced his engagement to Loella Ponsonby, daughter of Sir Frederick Ponsonby, who has held the office of Treasurer to the King and Keeper of the Privy Purse, under both King Edward and King George.

Transmitting 'Three-Dimensional Sound'

the most interesting of these new achievements by Bell acoustical engineers. "It might be described as the reproduction of sound in three dimensions; 'sculptured' is a fanciful term that has been applied. The accurate placing of electrically-transmitted sound is what has been accomplished.

AT A SYMPHONY concert or a theatrical performance a person can close his eyes and tell pretty well from what part of the stage certain sounds come. And if someone up in the gallery shouts, "Bravo!" or "Get the book!" an auditor in the dress circle doesn't have to look to learn where the voice came from. This has not been the case, however, when sound was transmitted. To a person listening to the radio or a talking picture the sound seems to come from one place.

It was auditory perspective which made possible some of the spooky effects obtained at the demonstration before the engineering society. On a small stage two stories above that which the audience was looking at, the various sounds were produced. Up there a bugler bugled, a dancer danced, a play was given, a tambourine and a mechanism making a noise like an airplane engine were sent floating about in the air. The sounds were transmitted by wire to the stage below, where they kept the same relative positions as the sounds above. Thus when a dancer tapped across the upper stage from left to right, the audience two floors below heard the dancing steps moving from left to right across the stage.

All these new effects were made possible by improvements and rearrangement of apparatus, of microphones, transmitters and loud-speakers. In the research of which the new equipment is the outcome the sound engineers had the co-operation of Dr. Leopold Stokowski and his Philadelphia Orchestra, and were able to make illuminating studies and tests with first-class music.

The Bell company has described its new apparatus as follows: "As a result of these studies (with the Philadelphia Orchestra) it was found that by employing two microphones, one properly located on each side of the stage, and by transmitting over two separate circuits to two of the newly developed loud-speakers, similarly placed, the effect of the actual presence of the orchestra could be obtained.

"Even with the discovery of a comparatively simple means of obtaining true auditory perspective, the problem was not completely solved. Never before had either the complete frequency or the complete volume range of a symphony orchestra been commercially transmitted and reproduced.

"NO COMPLETE chain of apparatus, from microphone to loud-speaker, was available that would faithfully transmit the entire range of frequency and volume. Bell Laboratories had already designed sensitive microphones that would transmit practically the entire range required, and only minor modifications were needed to make them entirely suitable.

"This was not true of the amplifiers. There had to be developed amplifiers which would faithfully transmit all frequencies from 35 to 16,000 cycles at level is from the barely audible pianissimo effects to the resounding orchestral crashes of 10,000,000 times greater power; and all the pieces of apparatus had to be so designed that even during intervals of complete silence not the slightest noise would be introduced to suggest the presence of electrical apparatus.

"Of even greater difficulty possibly was the design of suitable loud-speakers. It is not practicable to obtain the entire frequency range with a single unit, and so two types of loud-speakers are used. One, somewhat resembling the horns used for sound pictures, is employed for the frequencies from 35 to 300 cycles; and another type for the range from 300 to 16,000 cycles. These loud-speakers are different from anything previously produced commercially. Never before have these elements fulfilled such difficult requirements of frequency range and volume. . . . The diaphragm of the low frequency element in the new loudspeaker has been made nearly seven times larger than that of the elements used ordinarily for sound picture reproduction. By these diaphragms a large column of air is set in motion.

"The ordinary loud-speaker also becomes directional in its characteristics at the higher frequencies. Low frequency sounds spread in all directions from the mouth of the horn, but the higher frequencies tend to concentrate into a beam projected directly ahead of the horn; and the width of the beam becomes narrower and narrower as the frequency increases. Because of this, the audience in a hall equipped with ordinary loud-speakers, never hears quite the proper blending of frequencies.

"THOSE directly in front of the horn receive too great a proportion of the higher frequencies, those on the sides receive too much of the low frequencies. To avoid this, the horn of each high-frequency element is divided into 16 diverging rectangular sections which spread the sound over an arc of 80 degrees vertically and one of 60 degrees horizontally. Two of these units placed side by side thus spread the sound over a horizontal angle of 120 degrees—a far wider coverage than has been obtained before and one which distributes the sound throughout the auditorium with a faithful blending of the frequencies."

garded as trade secrets.

At the demonstration here, there were three microphones in use on the upper stage, each connected by a separate pair of wires with a loud-speaker in a corresponding position on the auditorium stage. The loud-speakers, incidentally, were hidden from view to prevent members of the audience from focusing attention on one and thus losing some of the effect produced by sending sound over more than one channel. The controls were operated from a place in the balcony of the auditorium.

Concerning the practical use of the new system, Dr. F. B. Jewett, vice-president of the American Telephone & Telegraph Company in charge of development and research, told a gathering of scientists:

"As to the future of the accomplishment . . . It is difficult to make any definite prediction . . . We can place at the disposal of the musical director instrumentalities which will enable him to produce at a distant point, or at many distant points simultaneously, a completely faithful replica of the tonal effects produced locally in the auditorium on the stage of which the orchestra is performing. Likewise, portions of this same equipment placed at his disposal the means of very greatly extending the range of orchestral reproduction and of making possible artistic effects hitherto unattainable.

"With these instrumentalities

available, the questions of the manner and extent of their use are primarily questions for the musician and those interested in music rather than for the physicist and the engineer. . . . By its very nature the ensemble of what we have created is primarily of value for musical production or reproduction in halls, theaters or auditoriums.

"IN A WORD, its field of applicability is where a large number of people might congregate for the common enjoyment of music of distinction. In its present form it is not directly applicable to the limited environment of the home.

"These new tools offer not only an enlarged field of possibility to the musician and the composer . . . but likewise a great broadening of the audience which derives pleasure from such effects. Many people, especially in our smaller cities, are now deprived of the ability to hear good orchestral music by the factors of cost and distance, and the element of time in going to the cities. . . . What we as physicists and engineers have done is to provide a mechanism for obviating these factors."

you —" and he flung a handful of blistering Spanish insults in Villa's face, "make public apology so everybody can hear you and tell them you are a cheap thief."

It came hard, but Villa took his orders. Still holding the pistol level with Villa's stomach, Richardson backed out and escaped in the dark.

The World War had broken out while Tracy was in Vera Cruz. He decided to join the Canadian forces, since there was no opening in Latin America. So he went to Montreal and enlisted as a private of machine gunners with the famous Princess Pat regiment. He was one of 14 out of his company to come back alive, and he came back with the Victoria Cross for breaking up a German attack with a machine gun, single-handed.

On the Somme, Tracy was caught by a shrapnel burst in the artillery fire preparatory to a German attack and was sent back to base hospital to die. He began to recover and was sent to England. He recovered completely; then he applied for aviation training. He emerged a Junior Lieutenant of the British Navy, a naval aviator, and flew the North Sea patrol until the United States entered the war. Then he was permitted to resign his commission, so he could join the American forces. He qualified as an American naval aviator and spent the remainder of the war at St. Jean du Mont, in France, training flying cadets.

HENEVER could settle down after the war. He cruised timber in the tropics, joined several tropical exploring expeditions. He went back to New Orleans. There, in 1922, he shot and killed John Murphy, but was exonerated as one who killed in self-defense. He worked as a salesman. He wrote his adventures for a national magazine and a newspaper syndicate. He became a prohibition agent.

Several times he was offered a Latin American army commission. He refused, always.

"I've been shot at enough," he said.

Nobody will ever know how many hundreds of men have died before the muzzles of machine guns he has manned. He does not even know himself.

"Do those dead men ever ride your chest?" he was asked once. "No," he said, soft-spoken as ever. "I never thought of it as killing men, somehow. To me, it said Tracy to Villa and Fierro, was always a problem of breaking up military formations."

Refugio rose the white flag of surrender. Half an hour later the Federal commander explained to his captors that he was not prepared to fight heavy artillery. The old park cannon had won its last battle with a single shot.

They marched south toward what became the battle of Rellano. President Francisco Madero from Mexico City sent a troop train against them, heavily manned. But the revolution had a locomotive to spare. Tracy Richardson and Sam Dreben asked for it, got it and wired its cowcatcher with cases of dynamite, capped to explode on contact. When the Federal-train was sighted, they started the dynamite-loaded locomotive toward it, hopped off as it started to gain speed, and then sat calmly beside the track and watched the collision and explosion in which hundreds died.

THEY manned their machine guns in the battle that followed. When it ended in a revolutionary victory, a man could walk on dead men, literally, for a quarter of a mile without setting foot to the ground.

Victoriano Huerta, later President of Mexico, was sent against that revolution with modern artillery, and shelled it into flight. Then, in a captured small town, before the forces broke up, Tracy Richardson and Sam Dreben got drunk one night, quarreled with and later a baby. They may be White's relatives or the family of one of his lieutenants. These shots are such as any amateur movie maker might take—the baby's first steps. White dandling the child, posing in a group with arms about each other.

So, too, the scenes, believed to be in a gang retreat in the Canadian north woods, might be of any group of prosperous business men out for relaxation. White, Klondike O'Donnell and one other man, unidentified, are trolling from a boat under the supervision of one who is obviously a guide. A bottle of whisky passes from one to the other. Just playboys having some good, clean fun in the great out of doors.

There are numerous scenes of the private plane which White either owned or chartered from time to time. Several shots are taken in front of the Capitol at Springfield, Illinois, and one before the national Capitol in Washington—the boys were probably there on official business.

Perhaps the latest sequence shows White—in the fall of 1933 it is believed—on his honeymoon with Nancy Kelly, the night club singer, whom he married last August. She is small and attractive, with black hair and delicate features which photograph well. Nancy wears jodhpurs, a smart-looking sweater, a small sport hat.

That fine friend and companion, Klondike O'Donnell, is now wanted for the murder of Three-Fingered Jack White, who liked to make amateur movies. O'Donnell, the police believe, has spent most of the winter in Florida. He was reported to be there when the police hunt for him was on.

The left end of the stairway to the palace of the Achaemenian Emperors is embellished by three tiers of plaques. Some idea of the magnificence of the Empire is indicated by the fact that each panel, separated by cypress trees from the two beside it, symbolizes a subject nation.

Central portion of the stairway, decorated with relief models of soldiers and with conventional insignia. The two sections representing a lion attacking a bull were the royal coat of arms of the family of Darius and Xerxes.

The right end of the stairway, which has a total length of 292 feet, gives valuable information as to the costumes of the Persian court in the fifth century. The palace is said to have been destroyed by Alexander the Great during an expedition of conquest.

Put An End To Night-Time Tossing... Do This And

Get 8 Hours Sound Sleep Tonight

...Feel Like A Totally Different Person Tomorrow

For the sake of your health, your nerves, adopt this natural, drugless way to get to sleep quickly at night... A way that greatly heightens energy and pep the following day

If you toss and turn when you go to bed at night—if wakeful nerves keep you from getting your full 8 hours of sleep—here's news that is important.

For there is now an amazingly simple way to make poor sleepers get to sleep... A way that not only brings sound sleep almost as soon as your head touches the pillow, but also greatly improves the quality of sleep.

A Remarkable Development

It is not a drug or a medicine—it does not remotely resemble either one. But is a delicious food-drink you take with hot milk just before going to bed.

Almost at once, you begin to feel relaxed. You fall asleep as effortlessly as a child. And sleep your full 8 hours more soundly than you have, probably, in weeks and months.

In the morning, you awaken greatly refreshed, nerves calmer, mind clearer by far. Filled with abundant new energy to carry you buoyantly through the day.

For this remarkable food-drink contains natural elements to fortify your vital reserve. And greatly increases your ability to recover from fatigue. Thus your come-back is much faster—your "staying powers" are heightened and multiplied.

How It Acts

This unique food-drink is called Ovaltine—first developed in Switzerland and now made over here. And it acts 3 ways to help combat the causes of inability to sleep.

First: Ovaltine, when taken as a hot drink at bedtime, tends to draw excess blood away from the brain. Thus inviting mental calm and "conditioning" the mind for sleep.

Second: Ovaltine corrects digestive unrest by gently stimulating and aiding digestive processes.

Third: Ovaltine supplies important food elements, the absence of which, in ordinary diet, over a period of time, leads to irritated nerves and sleeplessness.

Why Physicians Advise It

So surprising are the results achieved by Ovaltine, that it has been approved by more than 20,000 doctors. While today its use has spread to 54 different countries.

Here in America, thousands of people take it religiously each night to secure sound, restful sleep and relief from nerve tension. And great numbers are voluntarily reporting results which have been surprising.

For example, Miss Lola Bridges, 1015 Oak Street, Winnetka, Illinois, writes: "I have been rather nervous all my life, and had great difficulty in getting to sleep at night. I seemed to be all keyed up and could not relax. So I started to drink Ovaltine—having heard glowing reports of its benefits. For the last month I have been drinking it regularly—both hot and cold—in place of other beverages. Now I sleep fine; feel very 'peppy' and everyone comments on the improvement in my appearance. In fact, I'm told I have never looked so well in my life. I certainly am grateful to Ovaltine."

Another interesting letter from Mrs. W. E. Griesemer, Berkshire Heights, Pa., reports: "3 years ago I suffered a nervous collapse, loss of appetite and inability to sleep. My nurse advised me to try Ovaltine, which gave me the desired results. Then, too, during the last Christmas season, I found myself overworked and immediately resorted to Ovaltine, taking it at night before retiring. I'm glad to say I awoke mornings very much refreshed, for it certainly brings one a peaceful night's sleep. I always recommend it to my friends who complain of sleeplessness."

These two letters are typical of hundreds regularly received.

Try It Tonight

Don't judge Ovaltine merely by what users claim for it. Try it and see for yourself how much more quickly you fall asleep—how much more completely you rest.

As you continue to take Ovaltine, observe how it restores your natural tendency to sleep soundly every night. Note how much more easily you recover from fatigue—how much more vitality you possess.

Phone your druggist or grocer for a tin of Ovaltine now. Mix 2 to 4 teaspoonfuls with a cup of hot milk and drink it before going to bed tonight.

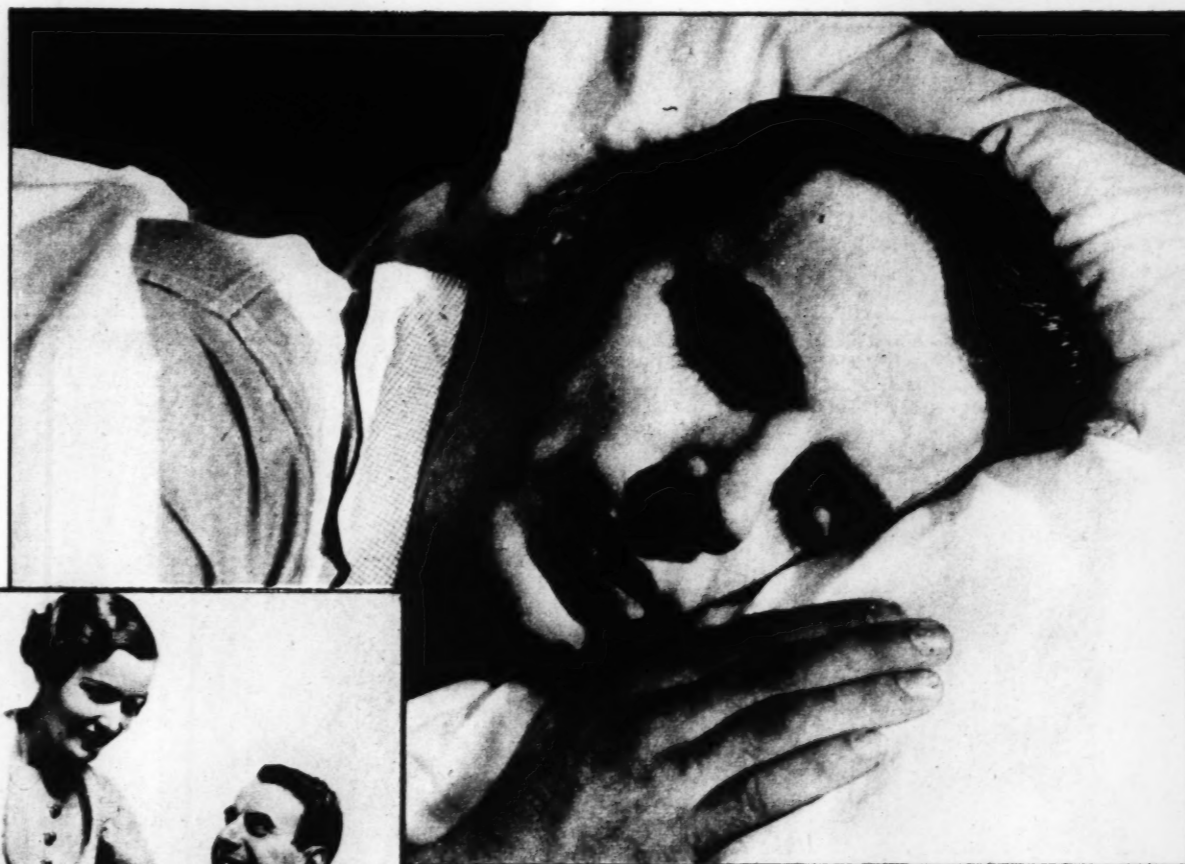

In the morning when you awaken, take stock. See how much fresher you feel—and how different the whole world looks when you've had your full 8 hours of sound, refreshing sleep.

NOTE: Thousands of nervous people, men and women, are using Ovaltine to restore vitality when fatigued. During the World War, medical authorities made it a standard ration for rebuilding shell-shocked, nerve-shattered soldiers. It is also highly recommended by physicians for nervous, underweight children—and as a strengthening food for nursing mothers, convalescents, and the aged.

OVALTINE

The Swiss Food-Drink

Manufactured in the United States according to the original Swiss formula

There is now a simple, drugless way to put an end to sleepless nights. You fall asleep almost as soon as your head touches the pillow. And sleep all night as peacefully as a child.

In the morning, you awaken clear-eyed, refreshed—looking and feeling like a new person. Filled with new energy and vitality to carry you vigorously through the day. Your ability to recuperate from fatigue greatly increased—your nerves steadier by far.

For Quiet Nerves and Sounder Sleep at Night

If your nerves refuse to relax at night—and keep you tossing and turning for hours, try a cup of Ovaltine at bedtime and see for yourself how quickly you fall asleep—how much fresher you feel next day. In this regard, Easton Jenner, 5506 Seminole Ave., Tampa, Florida, writes: "Ovaltine is really wonderful for high-strung nerves and sleeplessness. After opera rehearsals, I have gone home and walked the room until 3 in the morning, until sheer exhaustion caused me to sleep in fits and starts. Now, I take a cup of Ovaltine, sip it slowly, tumble into bed, and in about 5 minutes am asleep. And I wake up in the morning feeling like a '3-year-old.'"

When Digestive Unrest Causes Sleepless Nights

In cases of sleeplessness due to digestive unrest, particularly gratifying results are reported by the use of Ovaltine. One typical letter comes from Mrs. Eva Miller, 5715 So. California Ave., Chicago, Illinois, who says: "Ovaltine is simply marvelous. I am using it in place of tea or coffee and feel much better. I was troubled with indigestion and couldn't enjoy many nights of sleep or rest. Now I sleep soundly at night and wake up without that tired feeling in the morning. I will never be without Ovaltine again."

To Increase Pep and Bring New Energy

Ovaltine not only brings sound sleep quickly, but also multiplies "come-back" and "staying powers" to a marked degree. Thousands of men and women take it regularly to restore vitality when fatigued—and find that it greatly increases both energy and pep. A typical letter from Mr. August Seelig, 363 Ocean Parkway, Brooklyn, New York, says: "I am a traveling field representative for one of the largest concerns of its kind in the world—and my business is to see that the salesmen are kept pepped up at all times. You will appreciate that to do this, I MYSELF must be full of PEP. After having read about Ovaltine in the newspapers, I tried it and now have more pep than ever—and I don't mean MAYBE. I'm recommending it to all our men to keep them fit."

"She was nervous, run-down I advised YEAST"

PROF. DR. JULES MONGES, noted consultant of the enormous Conception Hospital, Marseilles, France, describes a typical case.
(Read about it!)

Contributor to "The Hospital," French medical periodical, Dr. Monges describes, below, a typical "case history." He adds:—

"Constipation, often, is Act I in a serious health tragedy. Poisons accumulated in the intestines undermine energy... lead to headaches, fatigue, lowered resistance to colds, skin eruptions... a shorter life.

"The most effective way I know to keep the system in a constantly healthy condition is to eat yeast. A food, it restores strength to exhausted intestines... increases gastric secretion... is a tonic for 'run-down' health."

Head of the Dept. of Internal and General Pathology of the Faculty of Medicine of Marseilles, Prof. Dr. Monges is one of France's foremost gastro-enterologists (specialist on stomach and intestines).

"THIS CASE," REPORTS DR. MONGES, "was that of a girl—'run-down,' nervous and subject to frequent headaches. She was always tired and losing weight constantly. X-rays showed that her colon (large intestine) was clogged. She had aggravated her constipation by taking large doses of cathartics and laxatives. My advice to her was to eat yeast, my usual recommendation in such cases.

"SHE SOON REPORTED BACK—her improvement was extraordinary. Eliminations regular. Energy had returned quickly. Headaches were soon a thing of the past. She has not suffered from either constipation or indigestion since."

DID you ever wonder if eating Fleischmann's Yeast would help you get over that constant "run-down" feeling? It will, very probably!

For yeast is not a medicine. It's a food, that acts naturally, to "tone up" sluggish intestines and soften the body's residues so you can get rid of them regularly.

And, as weakened bowel muscles start to do their work again, you notice more energy. You aren't so nervous... don't have those awful headaches. You feel like eating—doing things—enjoying life. You're on the road to health again!

Doesn't it sound simple—sensible? It is! But to get these benefits you should start right away. Just go to a grocery, a restaurant or soda fountain, and get a supply of Fleischmann's Yeast (rich in vitamins B, G and D) and eat 3 cakes each day, regularly.

Keep it up for at least a month and see how much better you feel!

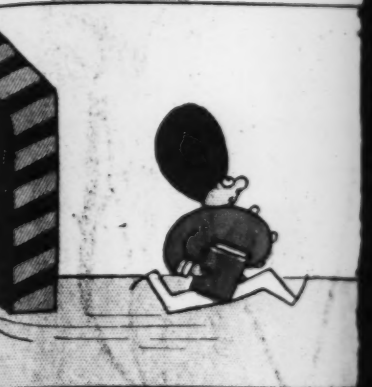

Copyright, 1934, Standard Brands Incorporated

Warning! When you buy yeast be sure you ask for FLEISCHMANN'S, because—

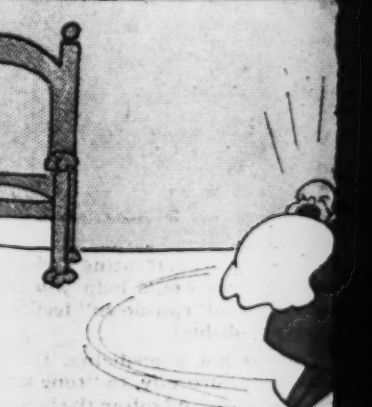

- 1 It's the only yeast that contains the three important vitamins—B, G, D.
- 2 It is the yeast world-famous medical authorities recommend.
- 3 For 35 years it has been known as the best for all purposes.
